Brit films rule? No way!

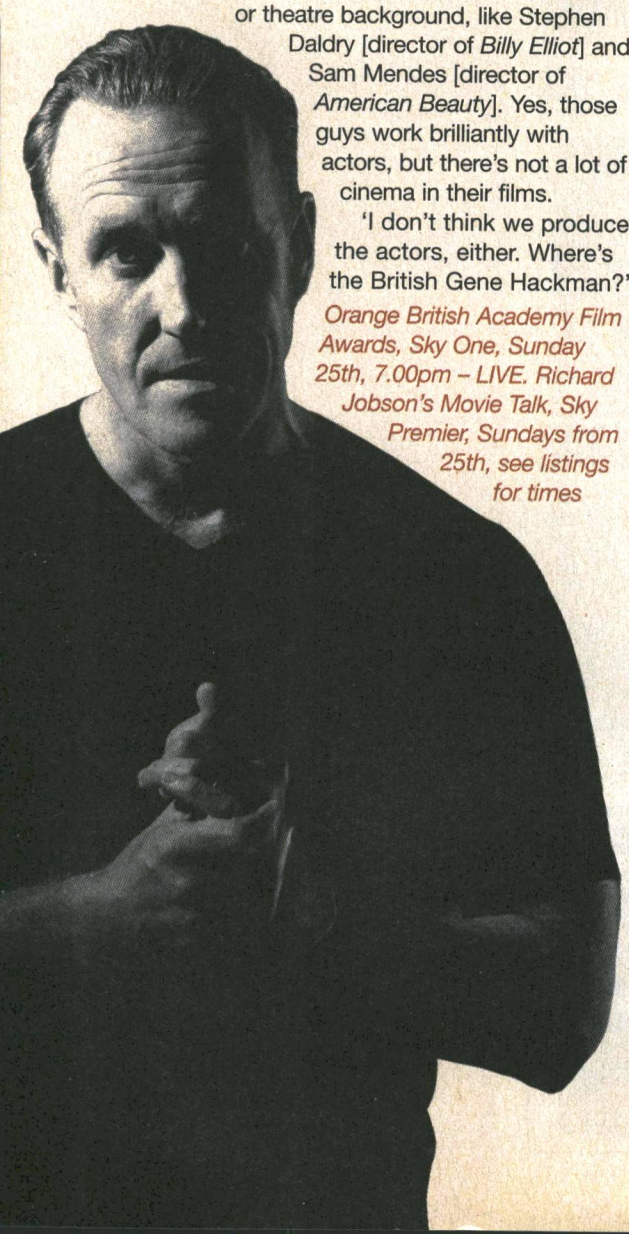
As the British Academy of Film and Television Arts prepares to reward last year's best films, Sky's film expert Richard Jobson, never a chap for sitting on the fence, declares that it was 'one of the worst years in living memory for British films. Only a couple stand out from a dreary pack, and they are Billy Elliot and Mike Leigh's Topsy-Turvy. One of the great things about Billy Elliot was that it connected with people who don't normally go to the cinema. We keep getting told about focus groups identifying 15 to 24-year-old boys as the target cinema audience, but they can't keep on aiming dumb movies at dumb boys.

'Billy Elliot was different. It was Flashdance in Durham, and doesn't stand up to much analysis, but it was a feel-good film and we're not very good at those, because we feel obliged to show a social conscience. The Americans are much better at them because they just go for sentimentality.'

Americans, Jobson adds, are infinitely better than we are at making films. 'It is a myth that we turn out great film-makers. Too many of them come from a TV or theatre background, like Stephen Daldry [director of Billy Elliot] and Sam Mendes [director of American Beauty]. Yes, those guys work brilliantly with actors, but there's not a lot of cinema in their films.

'I don't think we produce the actors, either. Where's the British Gene Hackman?'

Orange British Academy Film Awards, Sky One, Sunday 25th, 7.00pm – LIVE. Richard Jobson's Movie Talk, Sky Premier, Sundays from 25th, see listings for times



From Bollywood to Hollywood

The actors interviewed on the new film channel The Studio, will need very interesting careers indeed to outdo that of the channel's presenter, Nikki Bedi. Nikki grew up in England, the daughter of an Indian father and an English mother. She went to the same Basingstoke comprehensive as Elizabeth Hurley ('Liz Hurley was the first girl to put mascara on me,' she informs me), but her 'Indo-Anglian' heritage, as she describes it, sometimes popped up to embarrass her. 'I'd be in Basingstoke town centre, with the glue sniffers and Liz Hurley in her punk days, and my grandmother would come along in her sari saying (Nikki drops her rather plummy vowels in favour of a heavy Indian accent), 'Come on, we're going to WH Smith'.

Nikki was preparing to go to drama school when she broke her back in a riding accident, and instead went to India to recuperate. There she fell in love with a huge Bollywood star called Kabir Bedi, married him, and became a star herself, featuring in such hit TV serials as The Sword of Tipu Sultan. She met Kabir in a stage production of Othello, in which he played Othello and she was Desdemona. 'The American actor James Earl Jones married two of his Desdemonas so, needless to say, Kabir will not be playing Othello again,' Nikki says. 'Actually, I had already seen him in the James Bond film Octopussy before I met him. He was the main villain ... I remember thinking, "Wow, he's gorgeous!"'

It's not every girl who winds up marrying a James Bond villain, or every girl who would want to, but then Kabir is one of the dishier examples of the species. They now live in Chiswick, west London, where Nikki watches films at every opportunity. 'Luckily, my husband votes for the Oscars so I get to see them early,' she says. 'I'm a real cineaste, or cinephile, or whatever the word is. Movie-mad, anyway.' So I ask the question all movie-mad people enjoy. Which three films would she take to a desert island? 'It depends on my mood, but right now it would be Pulp Fiction, Betty Blue, and a Hindi film called Roja, a love story set against a background of terrorism in Kashmir. That film stopped me being contemptuous of commercial cinema in India. But what's so nice about this job is that it's not related to India at all. I don't have to be a Bollywood expert, thank God.'

Nikki Bedi is the on-screen presenter of new film channel The Studio

Spotlight on the Street

Sue Nicholls and Amanda Barrie – better known to the world as Coronation Street's Audrey Roberts and Alma Baldwin – are, says Tracy Shaw, like second mothers to her. 'I have the same agent as Amanda, and she's always been there for me.' Shaw – herself better known as hairdresser Maxine Peacock, married to nice-but-dopey butcher Ashley – is referring to the slings and arrows of soap stardom, of which she has had more than her fair share, with tabloid newspapers keeping careful watch on her love life. When she first got into the acting business, with a bit part in the Russ Abbot vehicle September Song, she never expected to wind up in the spotlight. 'You can't prepare yourself for it,' she says. 'And I have been the perfect target for them.'

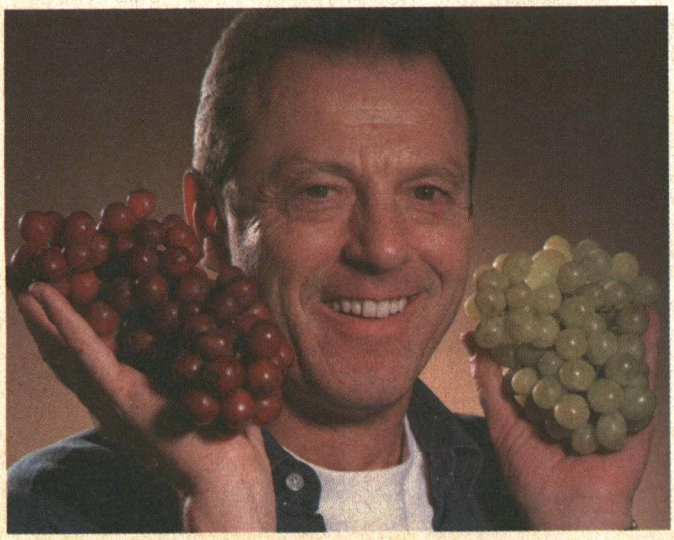
Tracy has become part of the very fabric of Weatherfield, and will remain so for a while yet, having just signed a new two-year contract. If she could have a hand in her own story lines, what might be in store for Maxine? An extramarital affair? She does, after all, seem a bit lively for daft Ashley. 'I don't know,' she says. 'Maybe it should be him who has an affair. But you've got to have one happy couple in the Street. A lot of people write in saying they would like us to become the new Jack and Vera, although I'm a bit worried about that.

'I think they should go on having fertility problems, and then maybe Ashley's old girlfriend, Zoe, could come back with her baby, which would stir things up a bit.' But Zoe's baby died, I point out. 'Oh, yeah,' she says, and I don't know which of us is more embarrassed – me for being a Coronation Street anorak, or her for forgetting the plot.

Coronation Street, ITV2, Sundays, Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, see listings for times, and episodes showing before ITV on Wednesday 14th, 7.30pm, and Wednesday 21st, 6.30pm

Grantham's grape venture

To Leslie Grantham, eponymous presenter of Grantham's Grapes, the programme's title sounds uncomfortably like a medical problem. All the same, he is delighted to be given this spin-off from his slot on This Morning with Richard and Judy, and it might even earn him brownie points with his in-laws – his wife comes from a family of celebrated Australian wine makers called Hickinbotham.



But Grantham will use the series, he tells me, mainly to debunk the snobbery surrounding wine. 'I watch wine programmes and hear them saying that such-and-such a wine has legs and body and curves ... and people are thinking, "Hang on, it's just a bottle of wine". It's like talking in Cockney rhyming slang, "I'm going for a ball and chalk down the frog and toad to the rub-a-dub-dub". Wine has its own jargon, and most people don't get it.'

Speaking of the rub-a-dub-dub, Grantham will forever be associated with the Queen Vic in Albert Square, where, as landlord 'Dirty' Den Watts, he ruled the roost. I ask him whether Dirty Den drank wine? 'I think he used to drink water, so he could keep a clear head for all his nefarious activities. Besides, you could tell that the stuff meant to be red wine was Ribena or whatever. Also, I find that the less you eat and drink as an actor, the better. It's like Gerald Ford, struggling to walk and chew gum at the same time.'

In Grantham's Grapes, by contrast, he can happily indulge his fondness for wine. But he balks at paying more than £15 for a bottle. 'I think it's ridiculous to pay hundreds of pounds for wine,' he says. 'After all, drinking wine is a bit like sex. The pleasure's great, but then it's gone.'

The point of no return

A mistake from years ago comes back to haunt two English backpackers in Sky One's forthcoming Australian-British co-production The Rubicon

THE IDEA of throwing your clothes into a backpack and hitting the road for a year seems like a liberating notion – but in Sky One's forthcoming two-part drama The Rubicon, an adventure in Australia comes back to haunt two English girls years later.

The year is 1995 and 19-year-old backpackers Claire (Patsy Palmer) and Samantha (Kate Ashfield) are living it up Down Under. Samantha has conveniently 'forgotten' about her boyfriend Nicholas in London, and gets involved with charismatic Australian Michael (Tom Long).

Samantha and Michael fall deeply in love, and, meanwhile, circumstances throw them into the path of an obsessive detective called Quint (William McInnes).

The girls' year off comes to an end, and Samantha returns to reality – London, her boyfriend, and her studies – while Claire lands a job in Sydney and stays on.

Back in the UK, Samantha marries Nicholas, finishes her medical degree and settles into a routine life. But five years after the backpacking adventure, Samantha's son develops a severe illness, and suddenly her world is thrown into chaos.

Now Samantha, Michael, Nicholas and Quint each face the demons of their past and there is no turning back.

The Rubicon's Australian director Rowan Woods describes the Australian-British co-production as 'a cross between reality TV and traditional Hollywood entertainment'.

He says the writer, Christopher Lee, 'has written a story full of mystery – based on some extraordinary coincidences'.

'It's a cautionary tale about a backpacker who finds herself with an extraordinary dilemma, having placed herself in some danger. Now she has to face the consequences of that. [Lee] raises the stakes in a daring way, much like Hollywood does on a regular basis but in Australia we tend to shy away from.

'The great cautionary tales about Australia are few and far between. Brits may be surprised – they will see an Australia that is scarier and more exciting than they might expect from the Australia they know through soaps and tourism.'

And what does the title refer to?

'The theme here is the idea of "crossing the Rubicon". The expression means passing the point of no return,' Woods explains.

'It comes from a time during the Roman Empire when Julius Caesar crossed a little river in northern Italy – the Rubicon – and in so doing, committed himself to war. There was peace while he was on his side of the river, but once he crossed it, there was all-out war. There was no going back.

'I wanted to tell a story where, at various points, the characters cross various personal Rubicons.'

WATCH OUT!

● Following in the footsteps of fellow Hollywood actresses Cybill Shepherd, Ellen DeGeneres and Geena Davis, 55-year-old Bette Midler (left) is starring in her own comedy series. Bette will premiere on Living soon, and also stars a well-known Brit. James Dreyfus, familiar as Kathy Burke's flatmate in Gimme, Gimme, Gimme, and Hugh Grant's bookshop assistant in Notting Hill, co-stars in the show.

● Settle down for an animated adventure in April with the hunky hero himself, Hercules! Disney Channel will be showing the British Television premiere of Hercules the movie over Easter, with the voice of James Woods as Hades, the Lord of the Underworld, and Tate Donovan in the titular role.

● The fifth series of Spin City is set to premiere on Paramount Comedy Channel in May. Michael J Fox left the hit series to concentrate on his battle with Parkinson's disease, and Charlie Sheen has stepped in as the new charismatic deputy mayor, Charlie Crawford. Though Michael will still be involved in the series as an executive producer, you can see his last episode, at the end of series four, on Paramount Comedy Channel in April.

The next Files

Robert Patrick is the new boy searching for truth with Gillian Anderson in series eight of The X-Files. But will he live up to the fans' high X-pectations? Interview: Lawrie Masterson

Star X-change: series newcomer Robert Patrick with Gillian Anderson

ACCORDING to a certain US show business publication, one of two fates awaits Robert Patrick, the new star of The X-Files: he'll either join the annals of TV infamy, as Dick Sargent did when he replaced Dick York in the 1960s sitcom Bewitched, or he'll make a name for himself.

Never mind that the 41-year-old actor has more than 50 movie credits under his belt, including Terminator 2: Judgement Day, Cop Land and The Faculty, plus the forthcoming All the Pretty Horses, in which he plays Matt Damon's father. It seems coming into The X-Files – in which he plays a new character, Agent John Doggett, rather than replacing David Duchovny's Agent Fox Mulder – will be a career maker or breaker.

But Patrick himself doesn't quite see it that way.

'They've created this new character – why not be excited about that?' he says. 'That's what I'm excited about. Right now I'm just happy I've got a job. It's always been about the work for me and how everything evolves is up to fate.

'I hope the fans have an honest reaction. If they don't like the guy, they don't like the guy – if they do, they do. It's for them to decide. I'm ready.'

The future of The X-Files has been a talking point for months. One of the keys to its return was Twentieth Century Fox's out of court settlement of a law suit brought by David Duchovny over syndication sales of the series and his eventual agreement to return for 11 of the 22 new episodes.

At the end of the seventh season, Mulder was abducted by aliens and fans of the show also learned that Gillian Anderson's character, Agent Dana Scully, was pregnant. Exactly what she is expecting, and by whom, remain closely guarded secrets.

As for Robert Patrick, he is more concerned about a new baby at home than one on the show. His wife, Barbara, recently gave birth to a son and they also have a daughter.

'Everybody at Fox and The X-Files was great about really trying to make sure I was there for my wife – and I was there.'

The opportunity to stay close to Barbara and his young family was one aspect of The X-Files that attracted Patrick after spending most of the last two years away working on various film and TV roles, including episodes of The Sopranos.

'I've been looking at trying to get into television for the past five years and this year, during the pilot season, I said I'd really like to aggressively find something that I felt I'd be suited for,' he says.

'I had no idea that this situation was going to present itself and when it did there was no hesitation ... I don't feel any expectation, nor do I feel any pressure, because the hard part was really just seeing if I'd actually be able to do it.'

He explains that once that obstacle was cleared, he was certain he could do it.

'I feel like if I work hard and take it scene by scene, episode by episode ... everything else will take care of itself.

'I think it's one of the best roles I've ever had the opportunity to play. I'm enjoying working with Gillian and ... I'm looking forward to the opportunity to work with David a little bit more.'

Patrick describes John Doggett as a 'salt-of-the-earth guy' with an attitude born of his time as a New York cop. He is a hardcore sceptic of the paranormal.

'I'd describe him as a little bit blue-collarish,' Patrick says, but, in a strong hint that the character also comes with some personal baggage, he deflects questions about whether Doggett is or has been married and whether he has children.

'I've got answers, but, you know, it wouldn't be fair to the show ...'

Scully's pregnant pause

GILLIAN ANDERSON is one of the few people who knows the answer to what has become a 'whodunit' – the identity of the father of the baby her character is expecting in The X-Files.

She knows this week, anyway. But in the way of series television generally, and The X-Files specifically, it could be someone (or something!) entirely different by the time the show's viewers are let in on the secret.

And other than saying the pregnancy will make any romantic relationship for Scully 'a little awkward' in the foreseeable future, series creator Chris Carter remains mum, so to speak.

'We still don't know who the father is,' he claims, seemingly at odds with Anderson. 'We're going to deal with how Scully got pregnant and it will have to be in a delicate, but somewhat provocative, way. But we've not done anything like this on the show before so this is new.'

Along with Carter, Anderson undoubtedly is hoping the identity of the father and other revelations will help focus attention back to the on-screen mysteries of The X-Files and away from recent behind-the-scenes controversies. She admits there is 'a very strong personality attraction' between her and the new regular character, Robert Patrick's Agent John Doggett.

'This season feels good,' she says. 'It feels fresh. The opportunity of creating a new character has imbued the show with a new energy and enthusiasm, so there's a feeling of starting over, in a sense.'

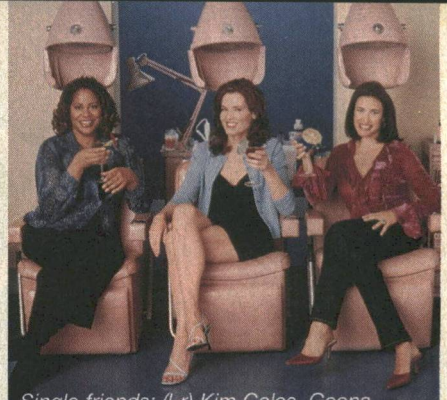
I dream of Geena



Single friends: (l-r) Kim Coles, Geena Davis and Mimi Rogers are best friends

TV or not TV? That's the question pondered by many film stars considering a move to the small screen. But Oscar-winner Geena Davis had no such qualms about making a sitcom – and she's loving every minute of it. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

LUCY, Roseanne and, more recently, Bette ... throughout television history there has been a recurrence of females as pivotal characters in situation comedies named for them, despite the fact that women still struggle for equal time on the big screen.

Now Geena Davis, who co-starred in a film regarded as an early surge of girl power, 1991's Thelma & Louise, has joined the ranks of the 'name' women on TV.

Davis has gone full circle in a career which included early guest appearances on Family Ties, in which the 6ft-tall actress played a housekeeper and unlikely love interest for the diminutive Michael J Fox.

The Geena Davis Show – so called despite the fact that Davis's character name is Teddie Cochran – was signed for a full season on ABC in America largely on the basis of the 44-year-old's star power.

'I think TV has been a wonderful medium for women for a very long time, and that's one of the reasons I love TV.

'It affords women a real home to expand and play fully rounded characters. I was addicted to Bewitched and I Dream of Jeannie. I really liked the shows where the lady was magic and could do stuff.'

In The Geena Davis Show, Teddie Cochran is a glamorous and very single career woman who meets the man of her dreams, widowed writer Max Ryan (Peter Horton of thirtysomething fame). It's love at first sight, and they move in together and get engaged. The catch is that Max comes complete with an emotional six-year-old daughter, an unpredictable 13-year-old son and a straight-talking housekeeper who is dubious about Teddie's qualifications for stepmotherhood.

Davis, whose recent films include last year's hit with the kids, Stuart Little, says she 'fell in love' with series creator Terri Minsky's premise and early episode scripts.

'In order to do a series you have to keep in mind that it might be successful and you might have to do it for a number of years,' Davis says. 'Therefore, the premise has to be something that lends itself to having enough stories to explore. Because we are dealing with somebody with sort of a dual life and so many complicated facets, I could really picture playing this character for a number of years and having a lot of fun with it.'

Each episode of the series is rehearsed for a full week before being recorded in front of an audience on Friday nights.

'It's vastly different to anything I've done in the movies,' Davis explains. 'It's really fun to get instant feedback from an audience as opposed to waiting nine months for a film to come out to find out whether people like it or not.'

Davis is also spending time on her 'other' career. After seeing TV coverage of the archery competition at the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Games, she decided to try the sport. Within six months she had a coach and now competes at an elite level.

> 'It's vastly different to anything I've done in the movies'

She narrowly missed selection on the US team for Sydney 2000, but was invited to Australia to compete in lead-up tournaments staged as dress rehearsals for the archery venue. Now Davis says she has her sights set on the Athens Olympics in 2004.

Before then, however, she intends to marry for the fourth time – in November last year she became engaged to 29-year-old surgeon Dr Reza Jarrahy.

The Cracker man

It is impossible to imagine anyone but Robbie Coltrane playing Fitz in the classic crime series Cracker. But producer Gub Neal reveals the portly Scot was not exactly the type of actor many people had envisaged in the role

Hilary Bonner

INSIDE STORY

TO THINK of the rotund Robbie Coltrane is to think of Eddie 'Fitz' Fitzgerald, the boozy but brilliant forensic psychologist he played in the acclaimed series Cracker. Actor and character are inseparable. And that's why it's such a shock to learn of Cracker writer Jimmy McGovern's reaction on meeting Coltrane for the first time. He studied the Scottish giant with an obvious lack of enthusiasm and announced, 'I see the character of Fitz as a very thin man.'

Producer Gub Neal, who conceived Cracker and thought of its leading actor, recalls: 'There was a long ghastly silence while I tried to bury myself in my seat. I thought, that's it, that's the end of the show. Robbie is just going to turn around and say, "So why are you talking to me?"

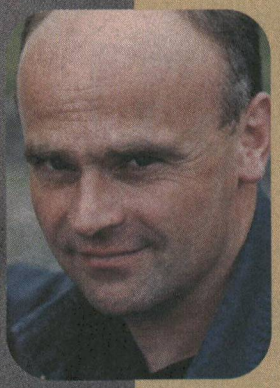
'But, eventually, he began to roar with laughter, and it turned out to be a terrific start to an amazing relationship between Robbie and Jimmy.'

However, for an overweight comedian to land the lead in a dark drama as a hard-drinking psychologist with a talent for solving crime and an irresistibility to women remains one of television's most unlikely pieces of casting.

'My first reaction was maybe I am absolutely mad, maybe I am wrong,' Gub remembers. 'But I stuck to my original instincts because I was so convinced of Robbie's abilities as a powerful straight actor after seeing him in [the TV film] Alive and Kicking, with Lenny Henry.'

Nonetheless, Coltrane was not even Gub's first choice to play Fitz.

'Originally, the show was written for Robert Lindsay, who had just done GBH, but when he saw the first script Robert said he didn't want to do it after all,' he



'I just alighted on this word "cracker". There was this snappy interesting word that could be used on several different levels'

GUB NEAL

'I was trying to think of titles one day ... and I saw a packet of Jacob's Cream Crackers in a shop window,' he remembers. 'I just alighted on this word "cracker". There was this snappy interesting word that could be used on several different levels. You can think of a firecracker or simply a wafer thin biscuit, which was always one of my favourite definitions after we cast Robbie. Or, there's the interpretation, which has worked so successfully, of someone who is a cracker, someone who cracks criminal cases.'

It was when he'd eventually gained the backing of Granada and achieved cautious interest from the ITV network that Gub sought out Jimmy McGovern.

'Jimmy was enthusiastic from the start but was busy on something else,' Gub says. 'We went through a rather pointless exercise of looking at other writers but always seemed to come back to Jimmy. He was the right person and we couldn't find anyone who had the same response. We ended up waiting for him, and when he did start writing, he completed the first two-hour episode in just two or three weeks. I think it was all there waiting in his mind to come alive.'

Then came that fateful meeting in Glasgow between Jimmy and Robbie.

'I think Jimmy was actually having a dig at me when he said what he did,' says Gub. 'I knew that, although Jimmy had not given a precise physical description of Fitz, he did see him initially as a sort of worried, quite slim character – and he was definitely very uncertain about Robbie.'

He continues: 'I think Robbie intuited correctly from the start that the thing about Fitz is the way he sees himself, not the way other people see him. That's where the humanity and the pathos come in. The way you want to be versus the way you are.

'Fitz wants to be heroic, he is always aspiring towards a state which eludes him. He cannot even get his relationship with his wife or his kids to work.'

Gub reckons much of Cracker's success was down to the way Robbie and Jimmy worked together. 'Jimmy provided this extra layer, gave us a character who operated on his intuition, without too much academic theory. Robbie brought this out and is also quite attractive and tactile in a very unusual sort of way, and yet quite scary.' Coltrane went on to win the coveted BAFTA TV Award for best actor three years in succession.

The Cracker format was sold to America, which launched its own version, starring Robert Pastorelli.

Gub states: 'Unfortunately, I was involved in that deal. I shouldn't really say "unfortunately" because it made Granada a lot of money. But Cracker became something different. I think what was made over there showed what happens when you stop thinking of a project as an artistic exercise and start thinking of it as a commercial one.'

Ultimately, 16 American episodes were made, but the series was cancelled after only 11 had been transmitted (all episodes were eventually acquired by the A&E Network). Intriguingly, one of the originally unshown episodes featured Robbie Coltrane – as the villain!

'I really want a tape of that,' says Gub. 'I think the interview scenes with the American Fitz must be just fascinating.'

UK GOLD

CRACKER
TUESDAYS FROM 13TH, 9.00PM

explains. 'Indeed, with hindsight, there is little doubt that what had emerged was a script that was not as well suited to Robert as it was to Robbie Coltrane.'

Gub came up with the idea for Cracker while working on Prime Suspect. '[Prime Suspect's writer] Lynda La Plante had flirted with a story line involving a psychiatrist, which, in the end, never came about,' he recalls. 'But the concept stayed with me and when I got a call that ITV was looking for new ideas, I took them this thought of featuring a forensic psychiatrist – a new kind of detective who used psychological theory rather than being a traditional gumshoe.'

Gub then needed a title. Cracker has virtually entered the language as a nickname for psychologists involved in criminal investigations, but it was actually invented by Gub on the spur of the moment.

Larger than life: Robbie Coltrane will be forever associated with Cracker in the minds of many viewers

Run for covers

Ricky Gervais is one of the most biting comics around. Now, as Nick Griffiths discovers, Play UK has let him loose with a new music-themed series

SOME people become presenters by ruthless means; others, through relentless determination; a few, by luck more than judgement. Then there's Ricky Gervais, who sort of shuffled into the job. Not suggesting that he's lazy or anything, but if he tripped over, there's a chance he'd stay down and try to get comfy.

His latest role is on Play UK, presenting his new series Come Together with Ricky Gervais. It's basically themed music videos with comic rants in between. That's Gervais's main skill: comic rants. 'I was the master of the two-minute slot,' he says. 'Two minutes on Gary Crowley and Claire Sturgess's shows on Xfm, two minutes on Mary Anne Hobbs' show on Radio 1, two minutes on The 11 O'Clock Show. Two minutes is not only about all I can manage, but all most people can manage of me.' Then Channel 4 came along and gave him Meet Ricky Gervais, the half-hour comedy chat show, and ruined the ambience.

Gervais, 37, from Reading, may be no household name, but he has an ardent fan base. When Capital Radio took over London's independent music station Xfm a couple of years ago, pushing him out of a job, the internet was awash with messages such as this: 'Please bring back Ricky', 'Why did Xfm get rid of Ricky Gervais? The man is a comedy genius', and the over-enthusiastic 'Ricky G is god'.

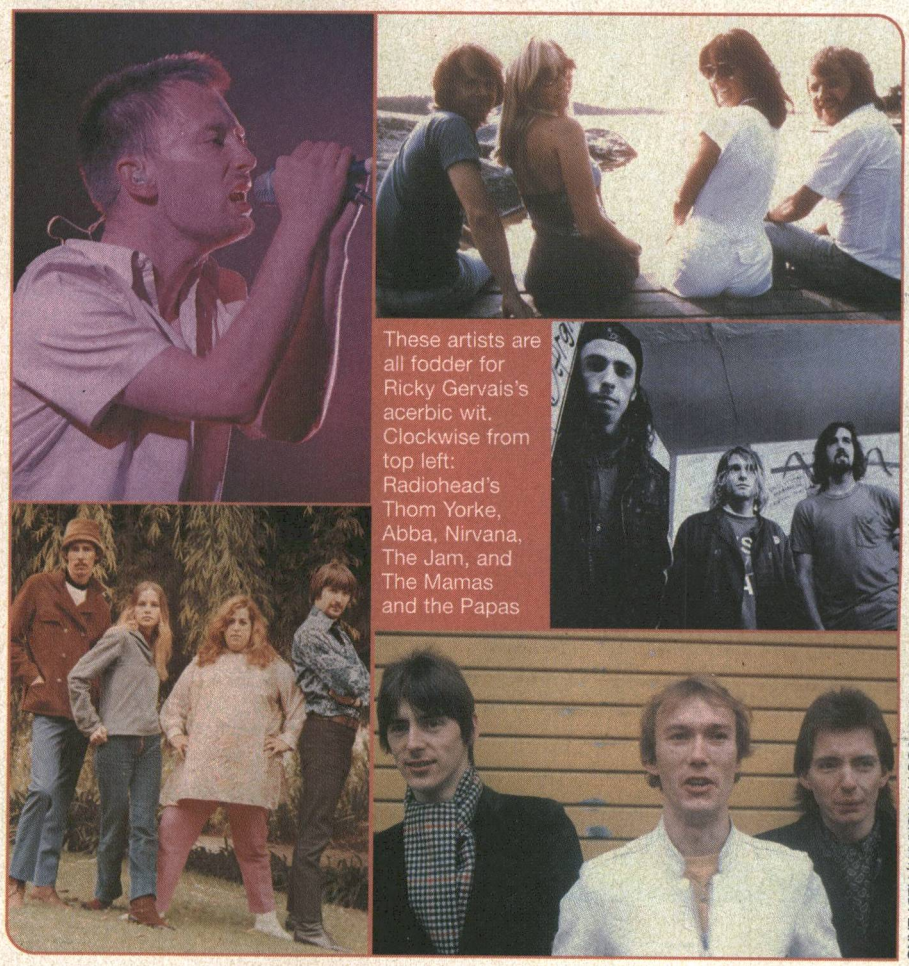
'My job was speech: liaising with news and writing bits and pieces, but that was too boring. I wanted to go on and muck around.' Which is precisely what he did, suddenly appearing on air, talking funny, observational rubbish. However, 'Capital came in and went, "Sorry, who's that bloke who does nothing?"'

Gervais is a glib, self-deprecating man, who paints himself as a hedonistic loafer. There must be more to him than that. Come Together finds him discussing artists within six music genres, from which he picks favourites. There's Gay Anthems. From that edition's playlist Gervais prefers Abba's Dancing Queen.

'There's a bit in the show where I talk about tribute bands. Abba not going to reform? It's OK because we have Björn Again. Missed the Beatles live? No worries, we have The Bootleg Beatles. Can't afford to see Mud live? I can't imagine being poor enough not to have Mud play in your front room and serve tea and biscuits at half-time.'

There's also Only the Lonely, for the bedsit listeners ('Radiohead, Creep? just incredible'); Women in Rock ('Yazoo, Don't Go, because when I was young enough to dance, that was what I was dancing to'); Before They Were Useless ('The Jam, A Town Called Malice'). For Deaths in Rock, Gervais ponders The Mamas and the Papas ('"All the leaves are brown ..." Of course they are, you always leave your salad ...') before plumping for Nirvana's Smells Like Teen Spirit.

Gervais was in a couple of bands himself, during the 1980s. One, Seona Dancing, had a record deal. 'A little duo who were signed and dropped very quickly.' At least they were signed. 'That's just the first rung of the ladder. It's like getting on telly is easy. You can fool anyone once.' But he keeps on doing it. 'Woody Allen keeps on doing it ... I'm the next Joe Dolce.'



These artists are all fodder for Ricky Gervais's acerbic wit. Clockwise from top left: Radiohead's Thom Yorke, Abba, Nirvana, The Jam, and The Mamas and the Papas

Journey's end

As Star Trek: Voyager embarks on its final series, Kate Mulgrew, who plays the ship's stalwart captain, Kathryn Janeway, reflects on what has proved to be a challenging and life-changing role for her. Interview: Paul Simpson

KATE MULGREW, alias Captain Kathryn Janeway of the Starship Voyager, is very clear about what she wants from the final year of the Star Trek series, beginning on Sky One this month. 'I'd like to see some of the loose ends tied up, but life being messy, I suppose many of them won't be.

'I always get a bit concerned when my senior staff don't get the screen time they deserve,' she told Cable Guide two years ago. That's something the producers and writers have addressed since, leading to her current dilemma.

'I would like to see all of the emotional underpinning brought to the fore,' she adds, as she reaches the halfway point of the season. 'I would like it to be illustrated how poignant my love for each of them is and how specific each relationship is. I don't know if there will be time for that, but that's a pipe dream.'

As the seventh season progresses, the crew of the Voyager encounter old friends and foes. Does Mulgrew have any idea what the end of the season has in store for her, apart from a gruelling two-hour final episode? 'I have no idea,' she admits, and jokes that she would only want to know if it was something she wouldn't like. 'I think it should be unprecedented and bold, and rather stunning.' Which, according to Mulgrew, could even mean the death of the Captain in a heroic final stand to get her people home. 'That's the truest to the entire story, and that's the way it should be,' she maintains.

How much of Janeway comes from Mulgrew herself? 'Before I would have said to you that I thought I was bringing a great deal of myself to Janeway,' she muses. 'But now I see that the evolution of the character has been far more mysterious than I could have imagined. Now I see that it was Janeway pushing through for Janeway all the time, and using Mulgrew only very discreetly. Relaxation and confidence are probably more trademarks of Janeway. She would steal from Mulgrew a demeanour, a sense of energy, occasionally a sense of stillness. I've certainly endowed Janeway with Mulgrew's humour, although I've had to confine myself, because in the end her humour is different from my own. She's a very different woman.'

Certainly, Mulgrew's life away from the set is different from Janeway's off-duty time. The actress recently married politician Tim Hagan, and has become fascinated by his work – particularly during the recent extended race for the US presidency.

'It's a world that I'm slightly familiar with, since my father was a politician, but I think that my husband's global knowledge is really intriguing,' she says. 'It's like learning an entirely new language, and I have the best possible mentor in him. If I thought the world of entertainment was intriguing, it's nothing compared to the world of politics. He's keeping me entranced, and he's trying to teach me diplomacy in the best possible way. 'Which,' she adds slowly, 'is a lesson I think I need to learn.'

Mulgrew hopes to return to her roots in the theatre once Voyager has finally wrapped, but she has no regrets about beaming aboard the Starship. 'Kathryn Janeway has been the role that has challenged me most on every conceivable level, both as an actress and as a human being,' she states. 'It's been not only a role – it's certainly been a way of life as well.'

Heads you lose

Spine-tingler Sleepy Hollow ranks as one of the most atmospheric Gothic horror fantasies of recent years – a real triumph for a film largely shot just outside Watford.

Words: Lawrie Masterson

LIGHTNING briefly illuminates a foggy field as a carriage makes its way through bleak countryside in upstate New York. The lone passenger, a prim, bewigged gentleman, is obviously unsettled by the foreboding atmosphere.

His misapprehension suddenly turns to fear. Even over the thunder of horses' hooves, he hears the unmistakable sound of a sword being unsheathed, then a swish as metal rends the chill air.

He leans out and is horrified to discover that his driver, still holding the reins, has been neatly decapitated. Panicked, he tumbles out of the moving carriage and runs through the field. Another swish ... and his head is gone, too, an expression of sheer terror barely having time to register before his face hits the ground.

When director Tim Burton set out to make Sleepy Hollow he promised heads would roll – and he certainly delivers.

Regarded as a genius by some, eccentric by others, 42-year-old Burton's often macabre vision has not always fallen into line with Hollywood's pursuit of box office dollars, but his commercial successes – among them Batman, which grossed more than $400m worldwide – have overshadowed what are perceived as failures (Mars Attacks! and Ed Wood).

The Nightmare Before Christmas, the 1993 stop-motion fantasy that he produced from his own poem, is either a modern classic or the twisted cousin of cuddly Disney fare, depending on your point of view.

Sleepy Hollow, Burton's $65m

Washington Irving's classic short story The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, concerning Ichabod Crane (a schoolmaster in the original text, but a constable in the film) and the Headless Horseman, certainly belongs in the plus column, having grossed more than $100m in America and over £10m in the UK.

The movie stars Johnny Depp as Ichabod Crane; Christina Ricci as the alluring Katrina Van Tassel, daughter of Sleepy Hollow's most affluent family; Miranda Richardson as her stepmother, Lady Van Tassel; and Michael Gambon as the community's wealthiest man, Baltus Van Tassel.

Set in 1799, the bloodcurdling tale has the bookish Crane being sent from New York City to the hamlet of Sleepy Hollow to investigate three recent murders, all by decapitation.

His first shock is to discover that none of the severed heads has been found. His second is to hear the legend of the Headless Horseman, said to be responsible for the gruesome crimes.

mercenary (played by Christopher Walken in flashbacks) had been sent to the area during the Revolutionary War to help keep America under the yolk of England. Rather than working for money, the Hessian, his teeth filed to points, killed just for the sheer love of carnage.

He was eventually cornered by soldiers and beheaded with his own sword. But when they buried him 'what was planted in the ground that day was the seed of evil'.

Unbeknown to Ichabod Crane, a sceptic who believes science can solve all riddles, someone has removed the horseman's skull from his grave. Now he is claiming other heads until his own is returned.

'There are so few true American folk tales or horror stories because of the relative newness of the country,' says Burton, who is currently working on his version of Planet of the Apes, starring Mark Wahlberg, Helena Bonham Carter and George Clooney.

'This was a chance to make a strong folk tale come to life and the image of Ichabod and the Headless Horseman – a person who lives in his head versus a character with no head – was very powerful to me.

'I wanted to make a film that was respectful of the source material but also tapped into some of the visual influences of the classic Hammer horror films of the 1950s and 1960s.'

Burton chose England to create his version of late 18th-century New York, which he built at Leavesden Studios, near Watford, where the elegant Van Tassel manor house and surrounding orchard also were constructed.

SLEEPY HOLLOW
FROM FRIDAY 2ND

Transforming Ricci

RAVEN-HAIRED actress Christina Ricci was Tim Burton's first choice of leading lady in the atmospheric horror adventure Sleepy Hollow. Casting her as the mysterious Katrina Van Tassel, Burton transformed the darkly enigmatic star into a blonde vision in wig and petticoats – while also making the most of her penetrating stare.

'I was so impressed that Tim could visualize me that way and it led to some interesting scripts coming my way,' reveals the young actress.

She says she was drawn to the simplicity of Sleepy Hollow, especially after she had just completed work on a series of bold and often shocking films – The Opposite of Sex, Pecker and Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas – and she relished the chance to live in London for six months.

'I liked the idea that Katrina was a fairy tale, "princessy" character, one-sided, no emotional depth,' she says.

'I thought, "Great". I hate sitting around talking about the emotional background of characters. Katrina is a storybook part. She's not real. That means you have much more freedom. You don't have to make anything she says or does believable.'

Ricci, who turns 21 this month, was just nine years old when she landed her part in the the career-launching Mermaids with Cher and Winona Ryder, and during shooting she made friends with Johnny Depp, who was Ryder's boyfriend at the time and a frequent visitor to the set. Depp and Ricci have now worked together three times – in Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas, Sleepy Hollow and their latest movie, The Man Who Cried.

But the actor leaves her cold in the sex appeal stakes: 'He's like another brother so I find it kind of embarrassing when we have to do love scenes with each other,' she admits. 'We just laugh and get it over with as soon as we can!' Ricci's part in the Addams Family movies confirmed she was a talent to watch out for, and so far she has notched up roles in 29 movies. Like Depp, Ricci often opts for the quirkier films, but denies she is attracted to dark characters, despite the fact that she looks so good in black. 'I'm not Gothic at all,' she says. 'Gothic people are the ones that want to look like vampires. I think all that stuff is creepy.'

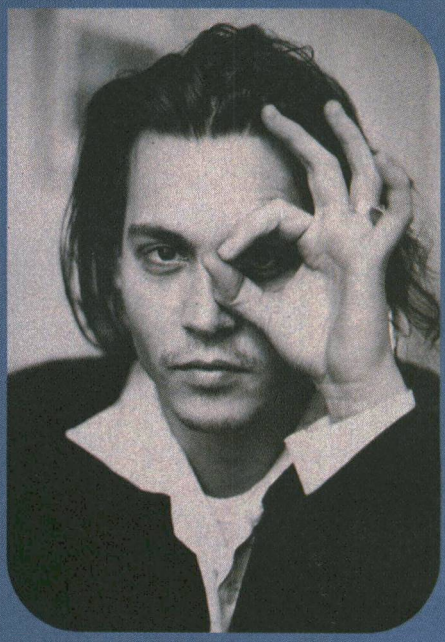
In at the Depp end



ONE PHONE call was all it took to convince actor Johnny Depp that he wanted to play Ichabod Crane in Sleepy Hollow.

He had already heard about the screenplay from producer Scott Rudin and was in Paris working on The Ninth Gate for director Roman Polanski when the call came from Tim Burton.

Depp, 37, says: 'Before Tim ever got the question out of his mouth – he literally got halfway through the thing – I said, "I'm there!"'

'To go to work with Tim Burton one time [on Edward Scissorhands, 1990] is really a great gift. To go to work with him twice [Ed Wood, 1994], you start to think somebody somewhere made a mistake – it was a fluke misspelling somewhere.

'When you get to work with him a third time, it's absolutely like returning home after battle. I don't know ... there's a strange connection between us. We share a similar appreciation of all things absurd. I'm just honoured and flattered he chose me.'

Depp explains his challenge was to 'surprise people with a different, newer Ichabod Crane' from the character written by Washington Irving, and he drew from three major influences in shaping his portrayal and the required English accent.

'Number one was Basil Rathbone from the early Sherlock Holmes films and number two was a great friend of mine who passed away, Roddy McDowall. In a way it was an opportunity to tip my hat to him. Number three was a terrific actress named Angela Lansbury. I just tried to blend those people and out came the accent.'

Depp says he was able to keep his distance from the eerie world created by Burton in Sleepy Hollow, maintaining that dealing with his horse, Gunpowder, involved 'a certain amount of reality.

'But I guess doing the scenes with the horseman got pretty spooky,' he admits.

The Western Woods, with its striking centrepiece Tree of the Dead, was constructed at Shepperton Studios.

The film's most elaborate set, the village of Sleepy Hollow itself, was built on the private Hambleden Estate in Lime Tree Valley, an hour's drive north of London.

British firm Computer Film Company (CFC) worked alongside George Lucas's Industrial Light and Magic on special effects, including key scenes in which the Headless Horseman appears. Different actors – Ray Park, who played Darth Maul in Lucas's Star Wars: Episode I – The Phantom Menace, and Rob Inch – were used for riding and fighting sequences, wearing blue hoods. Later these were digitally removed and replaced by background, including lightning, swirling fog and smoke.

'It's quite complicated in that it has to be done very well,' says Mark Nelmes, one of six CFC special effects designers who worked on Sleepy Hollow. 'The moment people stop believing it's a headless man, then they're not going to watch the film in the same way.

'Basically, it was decided to shoot whatever on any given day, then we'd sort it out afterwards. Tim was free to set up any shots he liked without having any distractions.'

But leave it to Burton, with his typically off-kilter sense of humour, to sum up Sleepy Hollow.

'I always thought that this film was sort of symbolic of the Hollywood studio system,' he says, without a trace of a smile. 'Boy, you know, heads do roll there!'

Spotlight on Julianne Moore

One of the finest actresses currently working in Hollywood, Julianne Moore, who stars alongside Ralph Fiennes in The End of the Affair, always approaches her characters with sincerity and compassion. She has reserved arguably her finest acting workouts for the two films she made with the precociously talented young director Paul Thomas Anderson. In Boogie Nights, Anderson's paean to the golden era of porn, Moore was heartbreaking as the sweet but troubled adult movie star refused permission to see her estranged children, while she ripped herself emotionally raw in the director's remarkable, richly textured follow-up, Magnolia.

First time lucky?

KIM NEWMAN ON ...
SAM MENDES

Briton Sam Mendes scooped Best Director and Best Picture Oscars for his first film, American Beauty. But will he be the latest in a long line of film-makers who have failed to live up to the success of their blistering debuts?

SOME DIRECTORS make their debuts with Citizen Kane (Orson Welles). Others start out with Piranha 2: Flying Killers (James Cameron). And yet, Welles followed Kane by struggling to turn out flawed masterpieces, as the studio system never again gave him the resources to match the near-perfect movie he turned out in his mid-twenties. Cameron, on the other hand, survived the Piranha sequel to make a solid hit (The Terminator), show his mettle with a commissioned job (Aliens), score failures (The Abyss, True Lies) that would look like successes for anyone else, trump his own high watermark (Terminator 2: Judgement Day) and make the biggest movie hit of all time (Titanic). Who do you think was happier – the Boy Wonder on a slide, or the quiet man who became King of the World?

Sam Mendes is only one of a handful of directors to take home the Best Director and Best Picture Oscars with his first feature. Besides a couple of actors-turned-director – Kevin Costner (Dances with Wolves), Robert Redford (Ordinary People) – the only precedent is Delbert Mann (Marty) in 1955.

As Mendes contemplates his follow-up project, he might be worried that most people would be hard-pressed to remember any other picture directed by Delbert Mann. Come to that, Costner (The Postman) and Redford (The Legend of Bagger Vance) haven't exactly set the screen alight with their post-debut offerings, either.

Directors have to come from somewhere, though there are those indie spirits like Joel Coen (Blood Simple), Steven Soderbergh (sex, lies and videotape) and Quentin Tarantino (Reservoir Dogs) who toil on the fringes of the industry then turn out an explosive debut feature that earns a reputation at festivals and leads to a slow-building but solid career. Mendes has taken a surprisingly unusual route, like Welles, of coming from the theatre to the cinema, having honed his ability to work from a script and with actors – rather than growing up shooting 8mm backyard epics like Steven Spielberg or glossy TV commercials like Ridley Scott.

An unusual aspect of American Beauty as an attention-grabbing film is that its director didn't write it. Since the early 1960s and the French New Wave, it has been absolutely essential for a young turk with a megaphone to write his own script.

Often, the best way to get a picture made has been to write a hot script and then attach yourself to it as a director. (Even after three films, Quentin Tarantino is still a better writer than director.)

Mendes was lucky enough to get together with Alan Ball's script (and Kevin Spacey's star turn) and, such is the way Hollywood works, he got the lion's share of the credit.

But American Beauty is a well-directed film, showing the theatre man's rapport with actors. Note how much better Thora Birch, Mena Suvari and Wes Bentley are than in anything else they've done – it's a sure sign of good guidance from the director when the youngsters can hold their own on screen with someone as electric as Spacey or professional as Annette Bening. It also takes an inventive approach to its good script, but Mendes will need to find material as good or better to avoid the dreaded 'sophomore slump'.

It takes a combination of talent, luck, good collaborators and politics to make a great debut film. To follow it up with something that isn't a disappointment takes little short of a miracle – which means there's a heck of a lot riding on his next project, the graphic novel adaptation Road to Perdition, starring Tom Hanks and Tom Sizemore.

LESLEY JOSEPH

What film really inspired you as a child?
To Kill a Mockingbird. It's just wonderful the way it deals with the whole racial issue and life as seen through the eyes of a child. How to teach a child right and wrong in a time when there was such awful segregation and such terrible injustice. There are scenes in it which stick out clearly in my mind, like when Scout walks back through the wood dressed as a ham. Gregory Peck as their father is great, but the children are also wonderful.

Who's your favourite movie actor?
I love Simon Callow, who I've worked with many times. I'm also rather fond of Derek Jacobi. I think Tom Cruise is a genius. I watched Born on the Fourth of July the other night and thought he was marvellous in that. I also really got into the whole vampire business having watched Interview with the Vampire. I started reading all the vampire books and wearing long black cloaks, long black skirts and red lipstick!

What's your favourite comedy film?
I'm not really into comedy films, although I did love Babe.

Who most inspired you as a child?
I used to adore the actress Georgia Brown.

What kind of movie would you most like to star in?
I would have liked to be in one of those big Hollywood epics from the 1980s with shoulder pads to die for!

Dawson's warning

Six nations™ Championship

ENGLAND V ITALY
SKY SPORTS 2 SATURDAY 17TH 1.30PM – LIVE

Hot favourites England must guard against complacency when they tackle the Azzurri in the Six Nations Championship, Matt Dawson tells Simon Johnson

Matt Dawson shows his skill against the Australians

ENGLAND scrum-half Matt Dawson has issued a strong warning to his team-mates and the English supporters not to take a win over Italy in the Six Nations for granted.

The Italians finished bottom on their debut in this tournament last year, whereas England came top, but Dawson – who plays for Zurich Premiership side Northampton – insists the newcomers did enough in last year's Six Nations to prove they will be a force to be reckoned with this time around. He said: 'They will have to work very hard during the tournament if they are to be successful, but their ground is an intimidating place to go to and they have a lot of potential.

'We will not underestimate Italy, they surprised everyone last year. They beat Scotland 34-20 in Rome and gave a huge wake-up call to the other nations. Overall, the Italians had a great first season in the championship, played some great rugby and showed they were not going to be pushovers.'

Italy wing Nicola Mazzucato

However, Italy's record against England is poor. England have beaten the Azzurri in each of their six matches and the Italians have conceded 126 points in their last two meetings, which included a 59-12 defeat in last year's championship.

Dawson believes, though, that Italy will be coming to Twickenham looking to prove a point: 'They will be wanting to come here and change the impression people have over here of their rugby. They have learnt from their mistakes and will be fitter and more experienced. Everyone will expect an England victory, but if the players expect it too, we will be in trouble.'

England go into the Six Nations on a real high, but under the weight of great expectations from their supporters. Having tied a two-test series in South Africa last summer, England staked their claim for a place at the top of world rugby by beating the world champions Australia, and South Africa towards the end of last year.

As a result, England go into the Six Nations as strong favourites to win all the matches and a Grand Slam, but Dawson insists the players are not allowing themselves to get carried away.

'We are not thinking about winning the Grand Slam because it is so important just to take one game at a time. If you worry about Grand Slams, you will lose your first game and then it is all over. We will just try and make sure we are up for every game. The mood in the camp is very upbeat after our performances in the autumn, but have to be realistic.

'The Six Nations is a completely different style of rugby and we have to perform differently against the home nations and France.

'England's fans will expect us to do well because we have beaten the world champions and South Africa, but I cannot emphasize enough that we are playing completely different games. The level of intensity will be bigger than the games in the autumn and will be on a World Cup level. It is a very special tournament and there are always upsets, as was proved last year when Italy beat Scotland and then Scotland beat us.'

Dawson sees many rivals for glory come April. He said: 'I look at the home nations and France in no particular order as real contenders for winning the tournament. If you look at the last five years no team has run away with it.'

Sky Sports will be showing England's other home matches in the Six Nations Championship exclusively live:

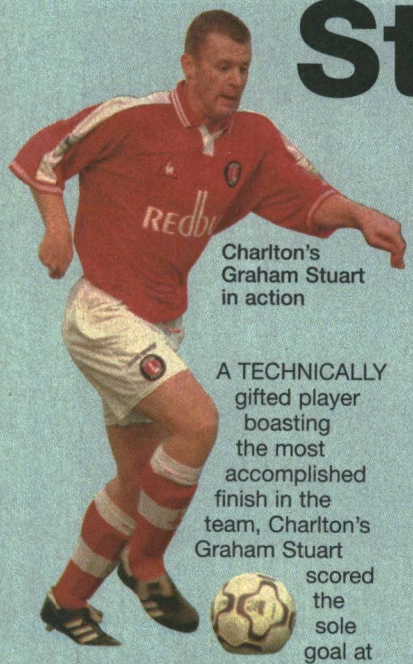
Stuart's southern comfort



Charlton's Graham Stuart in action

Charlton's Graham Stuart is relishing his role with his second London club as Graham Oliver discovers

A TECHNICALLY gifted player boasting the most accomplished finish in the team, Charlton's Graham Stuart scored the sole goal at St James' Park in September that secured all three points for the Addicks. But does he think that Bobby Robson's side will be as generous in the return fixture at the Valley? 'I'm sure they'll be happy to see how the game goes for the first 20 minutes. It's important for us to go out and run the game, and Newcastle could inflict a bit of damage if we go forward too haphazardly.'

South Londoner Stuart has formed a tight and intuitive midfield quartet with skipper Mark Kinsella, John Robinson and Claus Jensen. But he's modest about his role in the centre of the park: 'The better the quality of the players you're playing with, the better you look,' he laughs. 'But we're pretty much all on the same wavelength. Also, we've been fortunate in that we've not had any injuries in midfield. And that sort of consistency is important for any side, especially for the smaller clubs like us, where we can't afford to use the rotation system.'

Stuart made his name at Chelsea before joining Everton in 1993. He played a major part in ensuring the Toffees' continued Premier League status by scoring two goals in an end-of-season win against Wimbledon in 1994. He then had a stint at Sheffield United before making the move to Charlton two years ago. But which of these clubs does he feel fondest of? 'I'm really enjoying myself at Charlton, and the attraction to come back to London was there as well. But Everton will always remain fondest in my heart because I had an exceptional time there and the fans really took to me. If I look back at my career, I've got Wembley to look at [in Everton's 1995 FA Cup-winning triumph against Manchester United], and that will always be an important part of my life. I'd like to have a few more years here, though.'

So what are his immediate expectations for the club? 'We need to make sure we are in the Premiership next season, because the windfall for the club will make us stronger financially. We can honestly say that we've probably inflicted our defeats upon ourselves. But having seen what's on offer in the league, I don't see any reason why we shouldn't be looking towards a mid-table finish.'

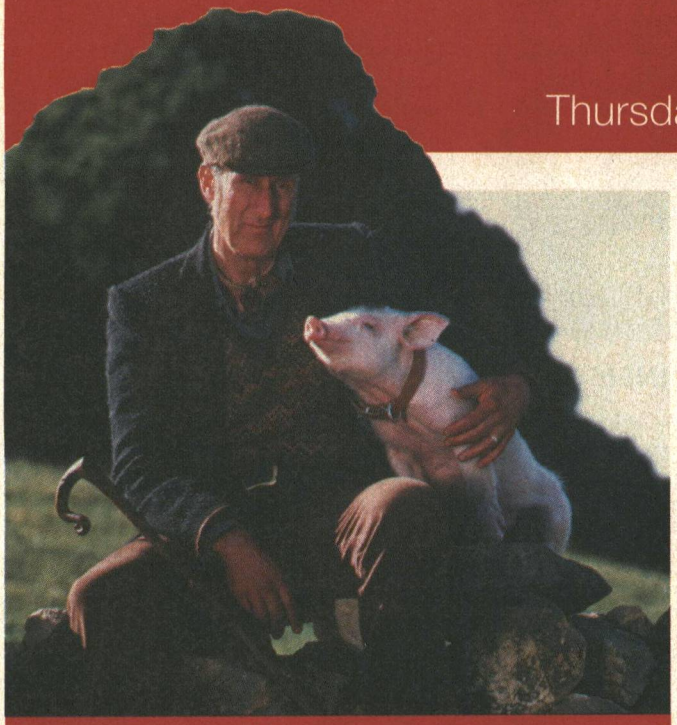
Week 1

Thursday 1st February-Friday 9th February



What a porker!

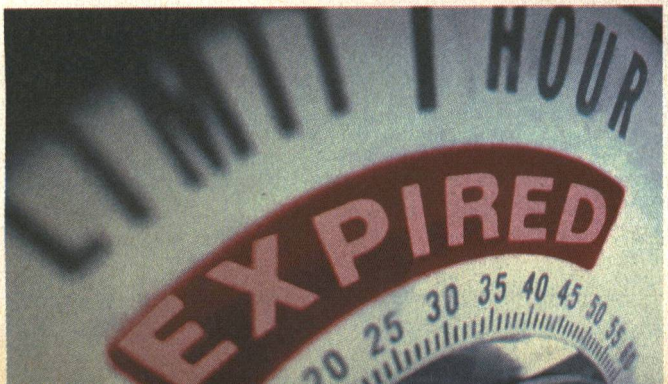
Splendidly adapted from Dick King-Smith's beguiling children's book The Sheep Pig, and gorgeously photographed in warm, earthy hues, this feel-good farmyard fable follows the adventures of the inquisitive orphaned piglet of the title, who unwittingly changes the lives of all down at Hoggett Farm. Babe's colourful co-stars include his adoptive mother, the sweet-natured sheepdog Fly; her bitter partner Rex; a coughing ewe; and a permanently flustered duck called Ferdinand. These, and other beasts, are brought brilliantly to life through a combination of the effects-tweaked footage of real animal stars, their animatronic stand-ins, and the expressive dubbing of a top-flight team of voice-over artists, which includes Christine Cavanaugh as Babe and Hugo Weaving from The Matrix as Rex. Chris Noonan, who also collaborated on the screenplay with co-producer George Miller, directs with skill and imagination and maintains a brisk pace throughout. Never condescending toward child viewers, he admirably avoids easy manipulation and instead generates genuine drama and suspense from such compelling situations as Babe facing the death penalty after being wrongfully charged with sheep-killing, and his triumphant debut at the National Grand Challenge Sheepdog Trials. The enchanting results should both brighten the mood of the grumpiest grown-up and keep even the most fidgety moppet mesmerised.

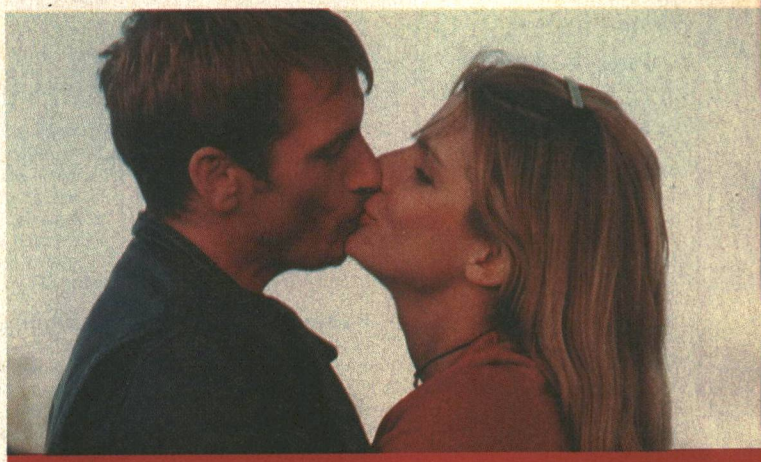
The Studio, Thursday 1st, 7.15pm

Just the ticket

Tears, tantrums, bust-ups and bitterness, and over what? Nothing more than car parking space. It sounds ridiculous, but with parking permits, controlled parking zones, zig-zags and red and yellow lines being the order of the day along with an ever-increasing number of cars on the road, Britain's streets are crammed to bursting point, and every available inch of parking space is at a premium. This month the docu-soap Parking Wars examines what is now becoming a national blood sport, the fight for a spot, following ordinary people as they battle neighbours, councils, traffic wardens, car compounds and even their own families. And who can blame them? The car, once a great liberator, is now a nightmare on wheels. In London a parking ticket can set you back £80, and if you find your car has been towed away, it can cost at least £135 to rescue it from the pound. By making it almost impossible to find a space in under 15 minutes and slapping on the cost of parking (not to mention road tax and petrol), it ultimately deters us from driving. This, in turn, reduces traffic and pollution. Not a bad thing, but it would help if the alternatives – local transport, coaches and trains – were reliable, and cheaper. Perhaps the first step is for local authorities to use the money from car parks and parking penalties to improve public transport, either by subsidising fares or by improving infrastructures – at the very least it might take the sting out of those parking tickets!

ITV2, weekdays from Friday 2nd, 6.00pm





Ace of Hearts

Any comedy co-written by and starring former foul-mouthed comic Denis Leary is bound to boast the occasionally outrageously funny line. But the real surprise about Stolen Hearts is that he convinces as an adorable romantic lead in this gently old-fashioned screwball farce. The film opens with inept Boston thief Leary and his sassy girlfriend Sandra Bullock arguing over the qualitative differences between the Batman movies and the stage musical Cats while involved in a high-speed car chase with the police. Leary has stolen a Matisse masterpiece, completely unaware of its value. But he's three days early for his rendezvous with the buyer. So the couple squat in a swanky residence, somehow convincing the locals that they're house-sitting for the vacationing owners, and Leary finds himself embroiled in a struggle to convince Bullock he's a born-again romantic when he's forced to vie for her attentions with a suave but secretive love rival. Meanwhile, Leary's bumbling crook cronies are making their way to the island and being tailed by FBI art expert Yaphet Kotto.

FEBRUARY BIRTHDAYS

13th Robbie Williams 15th Matt Groening
17th Rene Russo 22nd Drew Barrymore

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries ★★★
21 March-20 April

VENUS waves her magic wand, casting a spell of romance over your sign. Those fleeting feelings you once had for someone may suddenly deepen, or an instant bond will be forged with a newcomer. It's time to take extra care with your appearance.

Taurus ★★
21 April-21 May

SECRET dreams and hidden messages may add to the allure this month, but you will have a hard time interpreting them. Pay closer attention to your nocturnal wanderings and listen carefully for subtle hints thrown out by others.

Gemini ★★
22 May-21 June

YOU switch from sceptic to spiritualist, courtesy of Mercury in broad-minded Aquarius. The universe has wonderful surprises in store for your sign, but first you must shed your superficial skin and look for life's deeper meaning.

Cancer ★★
22 June-23 July

YOU will be inclined to speak your mind and do as you please this month. It's not that you wish to hurt others, but simply your own needs are more pressing. Just be sure to draw the line at shutting loved ones out.

Leo ★★
24 July-23 August

YOU love to see others happy, but resent being taken for granted. Hence, people walk a fine line when seeking your assistance. Those clever enough to use flattery as a tool may succeed, but demanding relatives can expect an outright refusal.

Virgo ★★
24 August-23 September

THIS month anything can happen! Events could occur out of the blue and throw your routine into chaos. Look on life's obstacles as challenges and you may learn a few tricks. Resist and you could miss a marvellous opportunity.

Libra ★★
24 September-23 October

MACHO Mars may offend your sensibilities, but its presence in your material sector can be used to full advantage. For example you can aggressively chase that long overdue raise or pursue the object of your affection with much more gusto.

Scorpio ★★
24 October-22 November

LET down your guard and show loved ones your sensitive side. With several planets at an awkward angle, you may have to eat humble pie this month and admit a mistake. Others will find your humility endearing rather than weak.

Sagittarius ★★
23 November-22 December

YOURS is normally a sociable sign, but happiness this month is a day in the country or an afternoon indulging yourself. The planets render you vulnerable, and encourage you to take time out and keep needy people at arm's length.

Capricorn ★★
23 December-20 January

CUT yourself some slack and accept that failure happens. You are often your own worst critic, yet others admire your quiet strength and wince at the high standards you set. Compatible Mars provides the acceptance you crave this month.

Aquarius ★★★
21 January-19 February

YOU will be more aware of your physical presence this month, flirting with admirers and noticing when heads turn. Your confidence is about to receive a boost, with compliments flying thick and fast and your true talents being recognised.

Pisces ★★★
20 February-20 March

VALIDATION from those around you helps shore up your self-esteem and gives you the confidence to try something new. You are heading into a successful year and are brilliantly poised to take the next step in your exciting life journey.

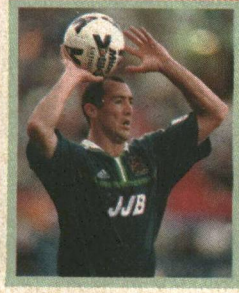
LIVE FOOTBALL LEAGUE: WIGAN ATHLETIC V WALSALL SKY SPORTS 2 7.00PM



The scramble for the top spot in the Second Division should provide some exciting action as Wigan play host to Walsall in a crucial promotion battle at the JBB Stadium. The Saddlers will be looking to their skilful Spanish midfielder Pedro Matias (pictured, right) to pierce the Latics' defence, marshalled by versatile right-back Scott Green (pictured, left) – who will be playing against his home town club. Walsall took all three points in a 2-0 victory when Wigan visited them earlier this season.

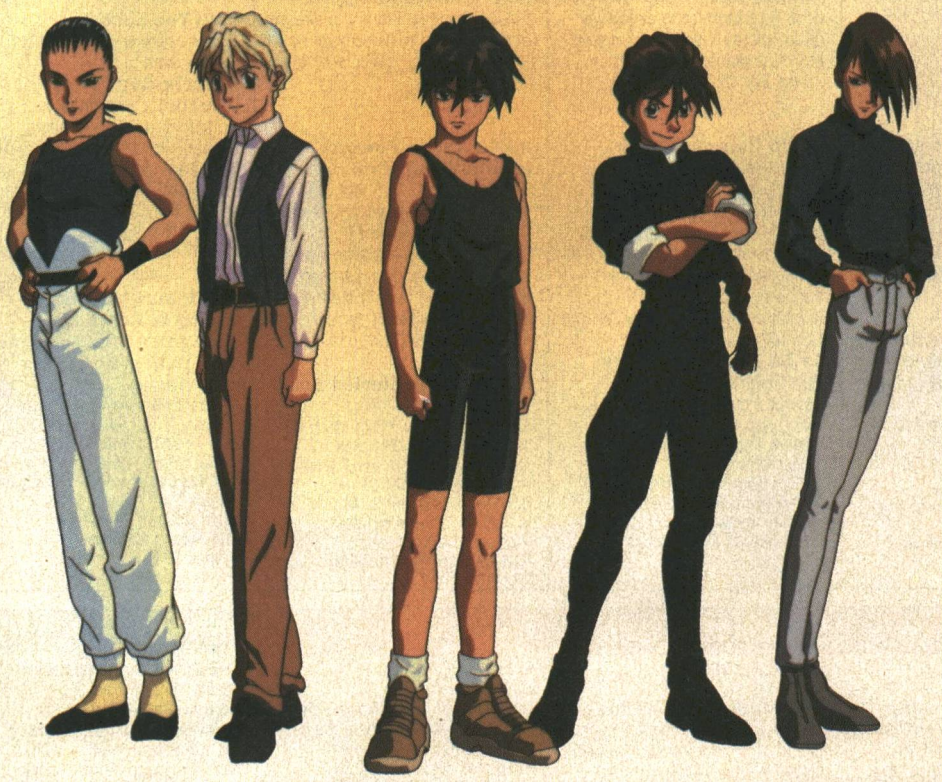
ANIMENIA!

Hold on folks, 'cos top-class explosive anime action is in town! The futuristic Gundam Wing has stormed onto Cartoon Network's Toonami, followed this month by another mega new animation series straight from Japan – Tenchi Muyo. Hey, let's face it, anime rules!

GUNDAM WING

THE PLOT

David Kaye, the voice of the villainous Treize, explains what Gundam Wing is all about: 'Mankind is now living in space, on giant orbiting space colonies called Sides. The government that rules Earth is downright nasty ... enter the revolutionaries with five robotic weapons, called Gundams. The plan is to take them to Earth to set things straight, and our five hero Gundam pilots [pictured below] begin the fight for their independence. To fight against me ... I'm Treize Khushrenda.'



THE GADGETS

Gundam
Made of an almost indestructable Gundaniam alloy, this advanced mobile suit, of which there are five different types, is invisible to radar.

Buster Rifle
The main weapon of the Wing Gundam, it can fire a narrow beam or a huge blast of particles.

Beam Canon
Firing a wide beam of slow-moving particles, this heavy weapon can destroy even Gundaniam armour.

Beam Saber
Used in close-combat by the Alliance's Leo mobile suit and the Gundams, its energy blade can split a normal mobile suit in one go.

Hyper Jammer
Used by the Gundam Deathscythe, piloted by Duo, this device can scramble enemy cameras and make the Gundam invisible to visual sensors and radar.

THE PILOTS

The five Gundam pilots, Chang, Quatre, Heero, Duo and Trowa (left), each wear Gundam suits with different capabilities. Kirby Morrow voices Trowa, who pilots the Gundam Heavyarms, and says of him: 'He is the moody, anti-social one of the group. I enjoy playing the bad boys with an edge. I sometimes wish he would just freak out!' The government has been taken over by the secret organization Oz. Treize leads the other Oz pilots: Zechs; his good friend Lucrezia; and Treize's loyal aid, Lady Une.

TENCHI MUYO

Starting on Cartoon Network this month, Tenchi Muyo follows high-school kid Tenchi Masaki as he accidentally wakes a sleeping demon after entering his family's hidden shrine. The demon turns out to be a beautiful space pirate called Ryoko, and she and an assortment of friends soon turn Tenchi's world upside down ...

MIHOSHI
Rescued by Tenchi from being sucked into subspace, this ditzy blonde is a detective from the Galaxy Police in search of the evil Kagato, who is on the Eternally Wanted List. Her partner in crime-fighting is the ambitious, fearless Kiyone.

WASHU
A scientific genius in a 12-year-old's body, the 20,000-year-old goddess Washu created Ryoko, and comes to Earth in search of her. She's funny and caring, and persuades Tenchi to help with her mad experiments.

RYOKO
Released from the shrine after 700 years, Ryoko's power gems allow her to summon demons, teleport to other locations, and move through objects. Although angry with Tenchi at first, she comes to love him and joins the family.

TENCHI MASAKI
This inquisitive 17-year-old is a descendant of the Juraian royal family, and lives with his father, Nobuyuki, and grandfather, Yosho. Ryoko was imprisoned by Yosho after she tried to destoy the planet Jurai.

AEKA
Half-sister of Tenchi's grandfather, Yosho, Aeka is the first crown princess of Jurai. Her quest to find Yosho leads her to Earth, and she, too, joins the Masaki family. She and Ryoko seek Tenchi's affections.

SASAMI
Aeka's eight-year-old sister, the second crown princess of Jurai, is very outgoing and forgiving, with a fondness for Tenchi. She and Ry-oh-ki, a 2000-year-old carrot-loving Cabbit (a mixture of cat and rabbit), are best friends.

WIN!

To celebrate the launch of Tenchi Muyo, we have some fantastic goodies up for grabs in a special anime competition! For five winners there is a beautiful hand-painted figurine of Tenchi Muyo's Ryoko, direct from Japan, and a funky Cartoon Network scooter, unavailable in the shops. Ten runners-up will each win a Ryoko figurine.

To enter, name the female demon that Tenchi releases in Tenchi Muyo

Send your entry on a postcard, with your name and address, to Cable Guide/Cartoon Network competition, PO BOX 2176, London W1A 5TW. The first 15 correct entries drawn will win. Closing date 28 February 2001. Full Cable Guide competition rules are on page 208.

Australia plays host to the first final in the Carlton Series. The nation's cricket team, with their opener Mark Waugh (pictured) and the rest of the hugely talented line-up are almost certain to be one of the two teams to make the three-game final, and if they do they will face either Zimbabwe or the West Indies. The battle for supremacy in the all-important opening game from Sydney – the other two finals are in Melbourne – should be enthralling.

LIVE FORD GOLF USA: BUICK INVITATIONAL
SKY SPORTS 2 9.00PM

Phil Mickelson (pictured) ended Tiger Woods's winning streak at the Buick Invitational at the Torrey Pines South Golf Course at La Jolla last year. Wood's list of six consecutive victories was the longest on the PGA Tour in 52 years. At one stage, it looked ominously like Woods was going to catch Mickelson as he began to whittle down a seven-stroke lead in his final round. The drama ended with Mickelson establishing a four-stroke victory over Woods and Shigeki Maruyama.

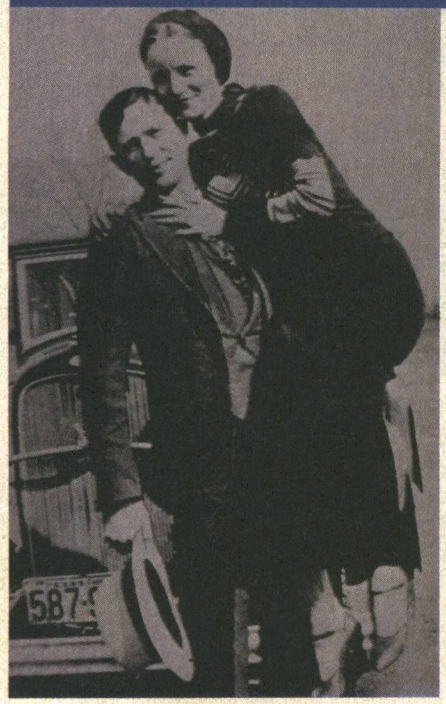
Love on the run



Think of history's well-known lovers, and right alongside Anthony and Cleopatra, Edward and Mrs Simpson, and the originals, Adam and Eve, you might very well list Bonnie and Clyde. Hence, the timely Valentine's Day showing of Biography: Bonnie and Clyde; a portrait exploring the relationship and the rationale behind this notorious duo. But what is it about these outlaws from Texas that has elevated them to the echelons of archetypal romantic couple? When Clyde Barrow met Bonnie Parker in 1930, he was a reckless robber and she was a lonely, small-town waitress. Both were bored, dirt-poor from the Depression and felt life had something more to offer. The misfits fell in love and, deciding upon a live-fast-die-young life, they embarked on a violent crime spree, terrorising America's Southwest. On 23 May 1934, after a deadly cat-and-mouse car chase, the lovers were brought down in a hail of bullets. By that time, Bonnie and Clyde had been making headlines for quite a while, and had even accumulated fans – anybody who fought destitution and the government, who stole for freedom, was ultimately living out the romantic secret fantasies of a large part of the American public, weren't they? So where's the romance? Well, there's something undeniably passionate about these two peas in a pod, who didn't care about anything except each other, and felt that together they could take on the world. And so, it comes as no surprise in a world seduced by fame, obsessed by crime and consumed by the media that Bonnie and Clyde should be immortalised as 'Romeo and Juliet in a getaway car'.

The History Channel, Wednesday 14th, 7.00pm

If love be the food of music ...

'If music be the food of love, play on', so wrote the Bard, little knowing that love, or more accurately sex, would one day fuel the entire music industry. From the hip-swivelling shenanigans of Elvis Presley, there has always been a racy element to pop music. It was in Elvis's era that it first got the thumbs down from strict parents. But raunch was, and still is, reason enough for adolescents to buy it. From the frankness of Let's Spend The Night Together to radio-banned smash hits like I Want Your Sex, the boundaries continue to be stretched. What's worse is that music is no longer about talent. At the risk of stating the obvious, the behind-the-scenes technical bods are mattering more than the actual 'stars'. But before banishing half of bubble gum pop to the scrap heap, let's face it – there are a lot of us buying it, albeit mostly teens ravaged by hormones. As part of MTV's Valentine's Weekend, Hips, Lips & Genderbenders covers no less than 40 moments where music and sex met to create controversy. Featuring comments by Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner, Maxim US magazine's Steve Russell and the author of Prozac Nation, Elizabeth Wurtzel.

MTV, Friday 9th, 10.00pm

Shiver me timbers!

Director Renny Harlin's rollicking pirate romp Cuttroat Island, takes us on an eventful voyage with lady buccaneer Morgan Adams (Harlin's ex-wife, Geena Davis) and her crew, as they set sail for the Caribbean in search of buried gold, whose whereabouts were partly printed on her dead father's scalp. Along the way, Morgan recruits an amiable thief named Shaw (Matthew Modine) to decipher the map's cryptic clues, and finds herself dealing with double-crossing crew members and her evil uncle Dawg (Frank Langella), who is also after the booty and holds the all-important remaining piece of the map. Harlin and cinematographer Peter Levy offer some vivid visuals and make the most of the exotic locations. Surrounded by grungy extras, the two leads fling themselves into their roles and handle most of their own stunts – as Harlin's repeated slow-motion inserts insist on proving. In between the action workouts, Davis creates a convincingly tough character. Modine, meanwhile, approaches his lovable rogue part with comic confidence and just the right amount of pantomimic posturing.

Wheels on fire

Vicki Butler-Henderson swaps four wheels for two as she takes to the racing circuit on a beast of a motorbike

Vicki Butler-Henderson
GIRL RACER

Wow! I'm such an excited little bunny this month because I've just experienced one of life's 'must-dos' – the raw, adrenaline-inducing thrill of razzing round a racing circuit on a motorbike. Here's what happened...

10.00am: Arrived at Snetterton racing circuit, in Norfolk, where it was windy and cold. Stepping from my warm car, I went straight into the cafe to meet my fellow bikers – all ladies – members of the Women's Motoring Service. A cup of coffee later, we signed our lives away ...

10.30am: Our chief instructor laid down the dos and don'ts on the track, and let us know which way the corners go. He also suggested where we should start braking for them! He explained the racing line at Snetterton and the flags the marshalls use. A red flag means there's been an incident and every biker must return to the pits. I just hoped I wasn't going to cause it! I wasn't looking forward to seeing the red and yellow flag, which warns of oil on the track. I've never raced bikes at Snetterton, so I listened to the advice of my fellow experienced bikers, such as 'don't rush out there, start at your own pace and build the speed from there'.

11.00am: The track is open! Bikes are warmed up, helmets strapped down, and everyone is ready to tackle the track. There is a warm, noticeable lack of machismo and competition. I turn my first pair of wheels on a racing circuit, initially following my Top Gear GTi film crew and Cable Guide photographer, all wrapped in the comfort of a car. My bike is a borrowed Ducati Monster 900, similar to my own, but with a bigger engine. It sounds divine as I throttle it up the main straights to 110mph, and soon I'm screaming with joy! Everyone else gets so carried away they start swapping bikes. The girls brought their own bikes, which consisted of Yamaha R6s and Honda CBRs, as well as some super racing jobbies.

11.30am: After a few laps, I head back to the pits to discuss my riding technique with the instructor. He'd been leading me round and then riding behind me so he could help improve my style. They say the camera never lies, and all his observations were filmed for the telly! My main problem was that I turned into the corners as though I was in a car – I needed to turn in earlier. A mini-camera was strapped to the bike, and I roared off, concentrating on those turn-ins.

1.30–3.00pm: After lunch, the girls go hell for leather, but I've still got a job to do, interviewing some of them as they pop into the pits. I go for a final burner and feel much more confident on two wheels. I even got a bit cocky and put my head down on the tank to improve my aerodynamics. I hope the Top Gear camera and Cable Guide snapper were in the right place to record such efforts!

3.00pm: The end of the session arrives as the sunlight fades. I clamber off the Ducati with the biggest grin, and squeeze in a few more interviews with my equally delighted fellow bikers. A last piece to camera wraps up the day, and one of the best experiences of my life!

DUCATI MONSTER 900 DARK FACTS

The biggest-engine model of Ducati's entry-level bike, its twin-engine gives superb low-down grunt, whereas bikes like Honda's CBR come alive much higher up the rev range. The Monster looks fantastic, and has a low-slung seat to make it easier for short legs! The bike I rode is the £6500, Dark variety, cheaper than a normal Monster and cheaper, in fact, then the majority of its rivals.

LIVE CHARLTON ATHLETIC V NEWCASTLE UNITED SKY SPORTS 1 3.00PM

Charlton seem more settled in the top-flight this season and will be a match for Bobby Robson's Newcastle at the Valley. Welsh international John Robinson (pictured, left), has been inspirational in midfield for the Addicks, but he will have to watch out for a revitalised Toon team who have their sights fixed on a European place. The Magpies could prove a handful with Robson's new signing, Chilean star Clarence Acuña (pictured, right), bolstering their midfield.

LIVE WEST HAM UNITED V COVENTRY CITY SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

Upton Park and the Hammers play host to Coventry, and will be hoping to weave their way through a defence that has struggled this season, despite the valiant efforts of the Sky Blues centre back Paul Williams (pictured, right). West Ham's trip to Coventry in September resulted in the first win in the new campaign for Harry Redknapp and his boys. That day, one of the stars in the 3-0 victory was their headline-grabbing Italian striker Paolo Di Canio (pictured, left).

borrow £20,000 for just £187 a month

What would you do with some extra money?

With a Homeowner Loan you could afford to purchase almost anything you have your eye on, or you could even reorganise other loans and credit into one affordable monthly repayment. A secured loan from Black Horse Finance gives you that freedom, and from a name you can trust.

You can borrow from £20,000 to £50,000 at 9.9% APR (variable), and choose to spread the monthly repayments over 5 to 20 years. Loans from £3,000 to £19,900 are also available at other rates.* What's more, we won't charge an arrangement fee on your loan.

Our optional, recommended Payment Protection Plan is designed to go to work when you can't. It can help meet your payments in the event of death, illness, accident, compulsory redundancy (or hospitalisation if self-employed). It's a small price to pay for complete peace of mind.

If you would like to apply for a loan, you can call us free on 0800 378 151 9am-9pm Mon-Fri, 10am-5pm Sat-Sun or for hearing or speech impaired customers with their own textphone, call 0800 731 7098. Alternatively, complete and return the coupon below.

LIVE FORD GOLF USA: BOB HOPE CHRYSLER CLASSIC
SKY SPORTS 2 9.00PM

The coverage of day two of the $3.5m Bob Hope Chrysler Classic at the Bermuda Dunes Country Club in California should see Sweden's Jesper Parnevik (pictured) continuing his defence of the title he won last year after a nail-biting final round. Rory Sabbatini had been leading as they entered the round, but he was let down by a brace of bogeys to give Parnevik, victory with a 27-under par 331 and, therefore, the first prize of $540,000.

ROSWELL HIGH FLYER

Miko Hughes is used to playing the kid who saves the day, but now he stars as an evil alien leader in the new series of Roswell.

Interview: Paul Simpson and Ruth Thomas

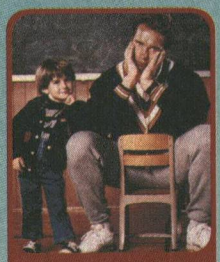
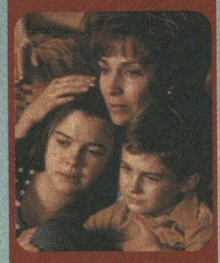
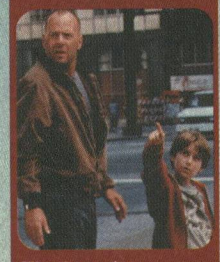
MIKO HUGHES chooses his words carefully. 'I don't want to ruin the story for you guys,' he says, as we sit in the conservatory of his agent's house just behind the Hollywood Bowl. The actor, who turns 15 this month and is already a veteran of a host of Hollywood movies, has joined the cast of Roswell in the series's second season as Nicholas, leader of the alien 'Skins'.

At the end of the first season, the four alien teenagers living in Roswell discovered that they were in fact reincarnations of the royal family of a distant planet, sent to Earth for their own protection. Nicholas is the leader of a faction who wants to ensure that they do not reclaim their thrones.

It's hard to believe that this outgoing teenager could play a 50-year-old alien trapped in a 14-year-old's body – but on screen, he dominates the action. 'It's one of the most fun roles I've done,' Miko admits. 'You kind of get a feel for how it is from looking at the script and the lines. They give it a back story.'







The boy done good. From top: Kindergarten Cop, Apollo 13, Mercury Rising

Miko's career stretches back to when he was just two years old, and takes in such films as Kindergarten Cop with Arnold Schwarzenegger, Apollo 13 as Tom Hanks' son, Zeus and Roxanne with Steve Guttenberg, and Mercury Rising opposite Bruce Willis. 'I've always been the annoying little kid who's always just kind of there,' he says. 'The kid who saves the day. There's a totally different theme going on [as] the bad guy. I like that!

'I like roles that are really intense in subtle ways,' he adds. 'In Mercury Rising, [my character] wasn't full-on autistic, and I think it would have been easier to have gone full-on autistic, instead of just a hint. [Before filming] I went to a school for special kids and I hung out every day for a month with autistic kids. It was a real eye-opening experience.'

Working on Roswell has reunited Miko with a number of former colleagues. 'The first week I was there, I counted 16 or 17 people that I had worked with before,' he laughs. 'The studio teacher on Zeus and Roxanne is the teacher on this show. The prop man was on that movie. Then there was a bunch of people from Mercury Rising. The camera guy was from Kindergarten Cop!' Notably, Miko is working with his Zeus and Roxanne colleague Majandra Delfino, who made her debut in that movie, and plays Maria in the series.

Despite his long film career, Miko seems unaffected by the razzmatazz of the business. He admits that 'when I was four or five, I was surprised ... that every kid didn't act', but he has a normal teenager's love of 'pizza, hamburgers and French fries'.

However, when he says he'd choose a bowl of Brussels sprouts over a Snickers bar, it does make you wonder if he really is only playing an alien ...

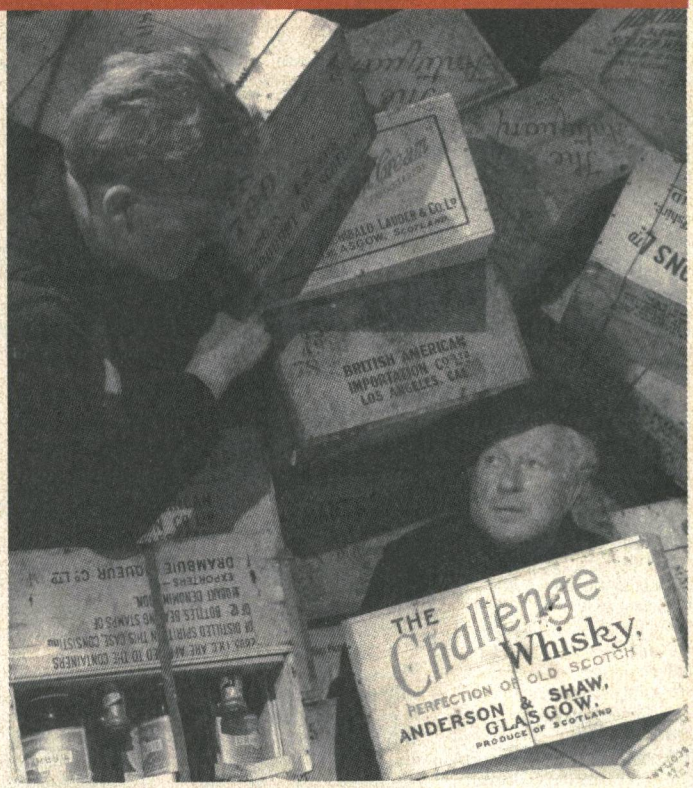
Saturday 17th February-Friday 23rd February

The Ealing power of comedy



The heyday of Michael Balcon's Ealing Studios came in the decade or so that followed WWII, when the British concern won a global reputation for a series of wry, barbed comedies. Deeply British (though not always English) studies in community or individual eccentricity, these films combine laugh-out-loud gags with a sense of shabby melancholy as heroes try to deal with a red-tape-strangled society by recourse to genteel anarchy. It was the product of a country keenly aware of rationing and the black market, and of the tension between the anti-authoritarian streak in the British character that had just won a war against the most oppressive system imaginable and the rise of a bowler-hatted bureaucracy that threatened to crush any spirit or colour that remained. Ealing's first international hit was Alexander Mackendrick's Whisky Galore (known in America as Tight Little Island, it plays on Carlton Cinema this week), in which a Scottish island takes advantage of the shipwreck of a cargo of booze on its shores to sidestep the rule of the stuffy English authorities and pursue their God-given right to get good and drunk. A cosy conspiracy picture, with characterful oddbodies in every croft, it lacks only one ingredient to be regarded as a definitive Ealing product, an appearance (or more) from the Studio's greatest star, Alec Guinness. Still, there are fine performances from the likes of Basil Radford, Gordon Jackson and James Robertson Justice.

Carlton Cinema, Wednesday 21st, 7.00pm

Review: KIM NEWMAN

Searching for the old soul rebel

Rod Stewart may have committed many unforgivable crimes against fashion in his career but there's a lot more to the star than spiky hair-dos and skin-tight leopard skin-print pants. Indeed, he should be revered as one of the best blue-eyed soul singers this country has produced, boasting a voice that is inspired by such soul masters as Sam Cooke and Bobby Womack – whose song If You Want My Love (Put Something Down On It) was referenced on Do You Think I'm Sexy – but yet remains genuinely unique. Doubters of Stewart's soul power should refer to his impassioned vocals on Oh No Not My Baby and, perhaps his finest work-out, the epic, heartbreaking Mandolin Wind. He's also a fine interpreter of other artist's work, and it can be argued that his renderings of Tim Hardin's Reason to Believe, Van Morrison's Have I Told You Lately? and the Tom Waits' tune Downtown Train improve on the originals. The former Rod the Mod is celebrated on VH1 this Saturday in Video Timeline.

VH1, Saturday 17th, 7.30pm

There's no escape – or is there?

From its beginning as federal prison in 1934, Alcatraz Prison was known as 'the worst of the worst' of America's penitentiaries, reserved for the most violent criminals. Located on a barren rock in the middle of San Francisco Bay, with a strong undertow on the west of the island, escape from 'Hell-catraz', was considered a physical impossibility. Naturally, it proved as escape-proof as the Titanic was waterproof, with 14 escape attempts by 36 men. Granted, only six of those are still classified as 'missing', their whereabouts unknown, but it proves a point. The last attempt was in June 1962. One morning guards discovered dummy faces in the bunks of Frank Lee Morris, John W Anglin and Clarence Anglin. They had tunnelled out with spoons and escaped using a makeshift raft fashioned from rubber raincoats. Decommissioned the following year, Alcatraz is now a national park and popular tourist attraction. With no evidence to suggest the three men reached the shore, they are presumed dead. Did they survive? It was certainly possible to swim the waters – three female swimmers proved as much in 1933. But, if the men survived, how have they avoided detection for all these years? Escape: Breakout from Alcatraz, analyzes this escape, immortalised in Clint Eastwood's 1977 movie.

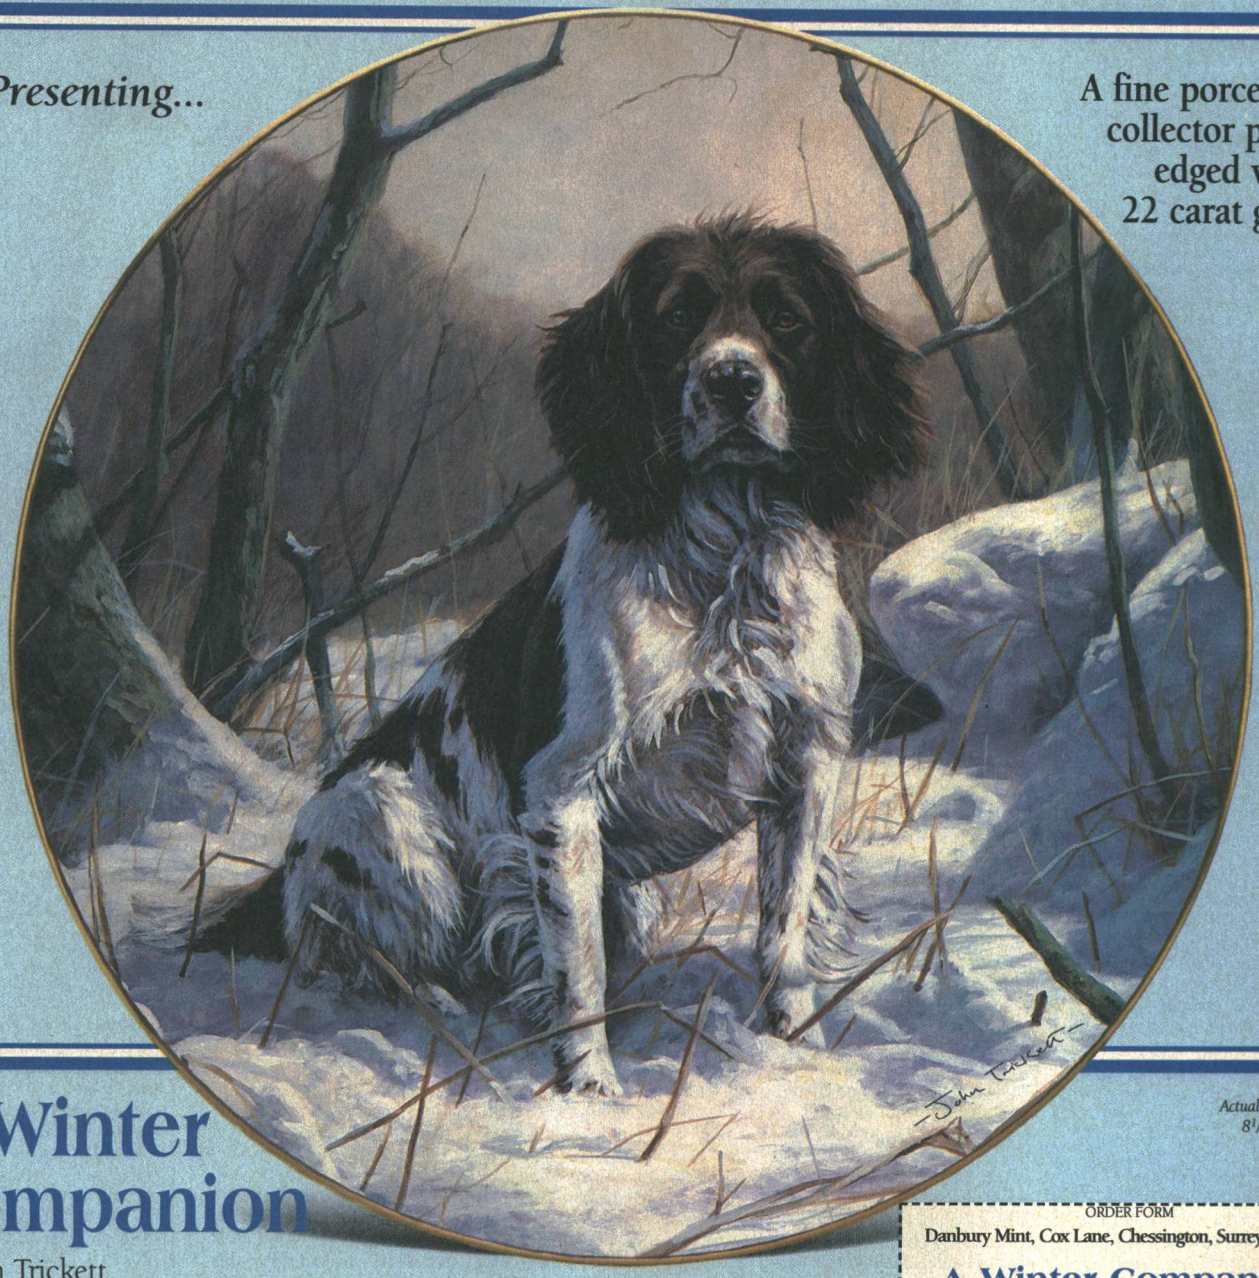
Presenting...

A fine porcelain collector plate edged with 22 carat gold



Actual size of plate is 8¼" in diameter.

A Winter Companion

by John Trickett

"I'll never forget that morning when I took my Springer Spaniel for a walk through our favourite woods," says artist John Trickett. "The snow still lay heavy on the ground... but there was a promise of Spring in the air."

"My Springer bounded ahead...eagerly investigating every sound and smell. Finally he sat down to wait for me...and as he rested in the snow, against a backdrop of bare trees and brooding February skies...I just knew I had to paint him!"

A cherished breed – painted by a master artist

Master artist John Trickett is internationally renowned – his works can be found in private collections around the world. His masterpiece, A Winter Companion, captures the beauty and character of one of our favourite sporting dogs.

The artist's love of dogs shines in the details of this beautifully composed portrait...the Springer's furrowed brow and glistening eyes...the striking brown and white of his wavy coat...his shiny nose. From the mottled spots of his velvety muzzle...to those splendid tousled ears, the dog looks so real, you expect him to jump up and dash towards you!

Fine porcelain and precious 22 carat gold

A Winter Companion has now been preserved on a fine porcelain collector plate, exclusively for Danbury Mint. Each superb plate is rimmed with a band of precious 22 carat gold and, as befits an issue of this quality, will be accompanied by a serially-numbered Certificate of Authenticity.

Excellent value – satisfaction guaranteed

This exquisite porcelain plate is now offered to collectors at just £19.95 (plus postage and handling). If you are not completely satisfied, simply return your plate within thirty days and owe nothing.

Made in 1971, this is George Lucas's first movie. Adapted from a short film he made at university, it tells the quirky, futuristic story of a society that has outlawed sex and uses drugs to control people. A long way from Star Wars, this is nevertheless a great story.

LIVE TEST CRICKET: SRI LANKA V ENGLAND
SKY SPORTS 2 4.00AM

England climbed to fourth in the international ratings, their highest position since June 1997, following their historic win over Pakistan – but their credibility will be seriously put to the test when they take on Sri Lanka. England captain Nasser Hussain (pictured, right) will want to continue his good run in the three-Test series in order to close the gap on Pakistan. England will want players like Graham Thorpe to be at their best, but must beware if Sri Lanka's Marvan Atapattu (pictured, left) finds his form.

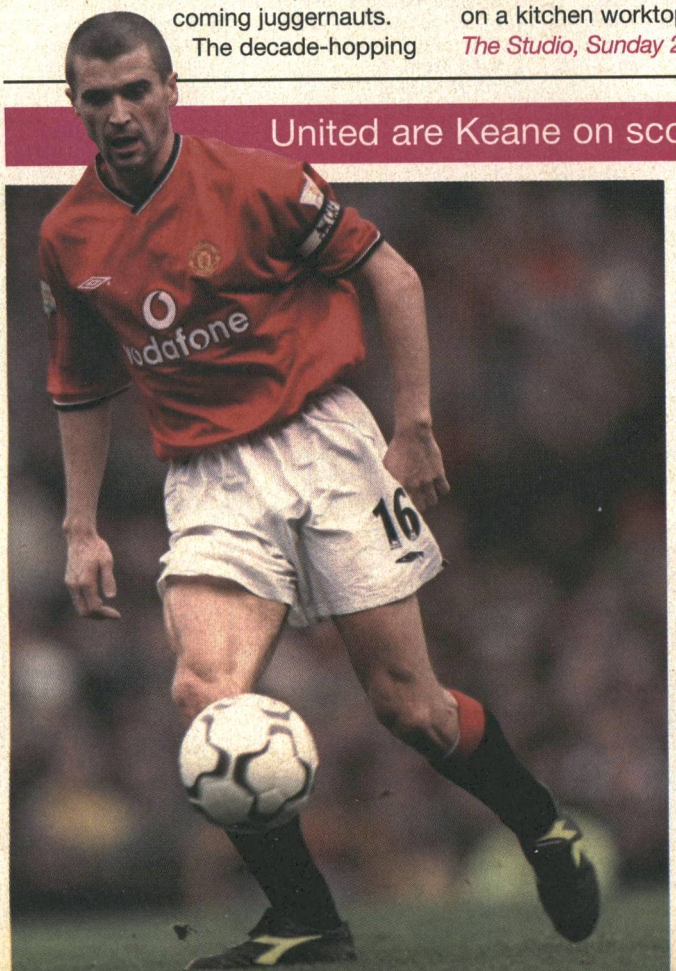
Van Damme's Timecop is on our side

Time travel is a reality in Timecop, an effect-laden sci-fi adventure, adapted from a popular comic series. Jean-Claude Van Damme plays a law enforcer whose job is to police the past and prevent a new breed of criminal from tinkering with the course of history. Which is exactly what his nemesis, ruthless senator Aaron McComb (played by Ron Silver), is doing to further his political career. Van Damme copes with his acting chores surprisingly well, and there's a tangible tension between him and Silver, who makes a truly nasty villain and demonstrates a mastery of the expletive-infested wise-crack. Director-cinematographer Peter Hyams (who was reunited with Van Damme for the tightly crafted thriller Sudden Death) finds time amid all the explosions to generate genuine suspense and takes the trouble to detail the nitty-gritty of time travel: he shows us the painful, teeth-grinding, body-shuddering effects of being propelled into the past, and rather than have his protagonists arrive at their destinations with not a crease in their uniforms or a follicle out of place between them, Hyams dumps them in lakes or in the paths of on-coming juggernauts. The decade-hopping plot might be trickier than that of your average big-blast action flick, but fans of Van Damme are serviced by many crisply choreographed fight sequences in which our high-kicking hero dispatches the bad guys with typically balletic grace. An eye-watering highlight sees the star escape injury by performing the splits on a kitchen worktop.

The Studio, Sunday 25th, 9.00pm

United are Keane on scooping the title



There is good reason to think of Charlton as the party-poopers for this season's two serious title challengers. When Manchester United only managed to take a point from the south Londoners in December's 3-3 thriller at the Valley, the gap between the table-toppers and second-placed Arsenal – who had subjected Newcastle to a 5-0 thrashing the same afternoon – narrowed to within touching distance. Suddenly, there was talk of the season being wide open again. It wasn't going to be another suspense-free one-horse race, with United mopping up the Premiership by Christmas. Now Arsenal were in with a shout for the top spot. Cut to the Valley, approximately 5.45pm, on New Year's Day: the Gunners have lost 1-0 to Charlton while United are celebrating their 3-1 victory over West Ham at Old Trafford. Arsenal's points haul for the holiday period amounted to four out of a possible 12, and hopes of the north Londoners mounting a serious challenge for the title had just become very slim. Which is to say, this weekend's fixture between United (whose Roy Keane is pictured) and Arsenal at Old Trafford might not develop into the do-or-die game it promised to be back in December. That said, at the time of writing, Arsenal are one of only two teams to have beaten United in the league this season (Liverpool are the other) and this remains one of the most mouth-watering Premiership fixtures.

LIVE TENNIS: ATP IN ROTTERDAM BRITISH EUROSPORT 6.30PM

Great British tennis hope Tim Henman (pictured) will hope to still be in contention as the $850,000 ABN/AMRO World Tennis Tournament in Rotterdam enters the semi-final stage. At this event last year, Henman – who ended 2000 ranked 10th in the ATP Champions race – lost in a thrilling three-set final to Frenchman Cedric Pioline. The British No. 1 will be looking for a good result to lift him into the next event, the AXA Cup in London, which last year saw him crashing out in the first round.

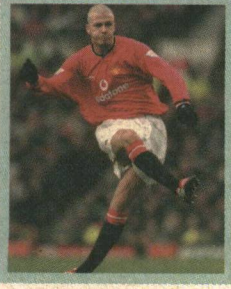
SKY SPORTS 1 12NOON



The Gunners will be looking to narrow the growing gulf at the top of the Premier League when they travel to Old Trafford to take on their old rivals. Arsène Wenger will no doubt be fielding his big guns, including talented Nigerian striker Nwankwo Kanu (pictured, right). The efforts of midfield dynamo David Beckham (pictured, left) will be aimed at protecting United's enviable home record as the Reds vie for revenge for their last meeting at Highbury, when Arsenal took all three points.

LIVE INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL: ENGLAND U-21 V SPAIN U-21 SKY SPORTS 2 7.30PM

England and Spain field their budding soccer superstars as the two Under-21 sides meet at St Andrews, the home of Birmingham City. Howard Wilkinson's new-look England team was unable to prove itself on its last outing against Italy because the game was called off, but the line-up is unlikely to change much for the match against an attack-minded Spanish team. Among those in the line-up could be West Ham United's Joe Cole (pictured) and his team-mate Paul Carrick.

Precious in name, and as a music box premier

Inspired by the graceful heroine of China's epic novel A Dream of Red Mansions, "Pao Chai", whose name is Chinese for Precious Clasp adorns a unique music box for the very first time. It is a masterpiece as stunning and delightful as any oriental antique. The gently curved, fine Heirloom Porcelain is hand decorated in jade-like tones in a subtle combination of smooth and marbleized surfaces. The elaborate glaze finish of each music box is triple-fired to achieve a unique shimmering lustre of exceptional depth and richness. Gleaming 22-carat gold, hand-applied in multi-layered vignettes, surrounds the delicate imagery and adorns the richly banded pedestal and lid. A hand-painted sculptural fan crowns the box and ornate golden handles enhance the feel of timeless antiquity.

Secure your "Pao Chai" music box today - fully backed by Bradford Editions 365-day guarantee. If you decide to keep "Pao Chai", you will be sent further music boxes in the collection at approximately monthly intervals, on a no obligation basis. If you do not wish to keep your music box, you may return it and owe nothing.

*Readers of this advertisement are asked to respond within 14 days. Please allow 28 days for delivery. Planned production depends on orders received. Offer applies UK only and is subject to availability.

DISNEY CHANNEL SAVES THE DAY!

I HAVE upgraded my subscription recently to include the premium channels, which has given me the added bonus of the Disney Channel. Well, you have saved me!
Disney Channel has worked wonders with my little boy, Alex, who's three, as he used to have terrible tantrums on return from nursery because there was nothing on TV to his liking. Now we have a special time together, sitting down and watching Playhouse Disney. We have lovely afternoons now – well done Cable.

MORE MISCHIEF FROM MALCOLM

MALCOLM IN THE MIDDLE is the funniest programme I have ever seen. It is by far the best thing on TV at the moment. Even the theme tune is excellent. When will Sky One be showing the next series?

D J Nicholls, e-mail

● Sky One tells us that the new series of* Malcolm in the Middle *can be seen later in the year.

ONGOING SAGA

I AM a huge Dragonball Z fan and I was really looking forward to some new episodes after Christmas and New Year, only to find that the Namek saga is being repeated AGAIN. I'm sure that some people out there have yet to see Goku and the gang destroy Freiza, but my friends and I have seen every episode from the coming of Radditz to Freiza's death at the hands of Trunks, at least six times! Please play new episodes!

Deborah and Jennifer Seagrave, e-mail

● Don't worry, you won't have long to wait – there are brand new episodes of* Dragonball Z winging their way to Cartoon Network in April, including the completion of the Trunks saga. Since Dragonball Z *is made in Japan, English-speaking fans have to wait until new episodes have been translated, which takes a while. So stay tooned!

Alex Lovell, Jason Canning and Dave Benson Phillips provide all the smiles on Playhouse Disney

There's a £50 prize for the star letter!

MISSING OUT ON LETTERMAN?

I AM an extremely big fan of Late Show with David Letterman. But why is it that we only get the current episodes for three or four weeks on ITV2, then they are repeated again, so we miss out on the episodes being shown in America?

Iain Oakley, e-mail

● An ITV2 spokeswoman replies: 'Late Show with David Letterman is one of ITV2's most popular shows. ITV2 is obliged, as part of its contract with CBS, to transmit the same episode that is aired in the States 24 hours previously. Since David has cut back on the number of shows he makes during the year, there is a higher rate of repeats, and you can rest assured that you are not missing any episodes. ITV2 has extended its contract for a further year, so you will be able to enjoy* Late Show with David Letterman *for another 12 months.'

SHOOTING STAR

AFTER getting totally hooked on Just Shoot Me, it has been taken off the air! I am going cold turkey ... and at Christmas time, too! Please give me a fix and return this great programme asap.

Mr M McLaughlin Blackpool

● Just Shoot Me is set to return to Paramount Comedy Channel with the first run of series five.

KNIGHT OF HONOUR

AFTER watching Bob Hope in the film Son of Paleface [pictured below with co-star Jane Russell] for the umpteenth enjoyable time, it has set my mind thinking. Am I correct that Bob has never been knighted? When you think of all the films he has made, and all those troops he has entertained in the past, I think that a knighthood is long overdue. Look at all the fuss that was made about Sean Connery getting a knighthood. When you look back at Bob Hope's career and compare it to Connery's, it makes your mind boggle!

M Samuel, Scotland

● Congratulations, you've won £50! Let us know your full address and we'll post you your cheque! The Queen awarded Bob Hope an honorary knighthood in May 1998. Bob has, in fact, received no less than five honorary Academy Awards for his contributions to the motion picture industry, and he has been honoured so many times that he actually holds an entry in* The Guinness Book of Records *for this exceptional feat!

COMPULSIVE READING

JANUARY'S edition of Cable Guide is always eagerly anticipated as it has lots of brilliant information on my favourite programmes, which are all screened at this time of year.
This month's Guide didn't let me down, with its in-depth articles, including one on Buffy that had great pictures. It all combined to make compulsive reading. Keep up the good work!

I'LL HAVE A 'P' PLEASE ... LIZA

CONGRATULATIONS, Sky One, for bringing back Blockbusters, the quiz that is interesting and educational. Liza Tarbuck adds to the entertainment with her quick wit. Well done!

CAN WE KEEP ON ROCKING WITH THE STONES?

I'M WRITING to ask if and when VH1 is going to have another Rolling Stones day. The last one was back in August 1998!

Daryl Barker, e-mail

● VH1 tells us that although there are no current plans to have another Rolling Stones day, the band are likely to feature on VH1 in the coming months. So keep your eyes peeled, Daryl!

OUTSTANDING TO THE CORRS!

A BIG thank you to Sky One for their outstanding coverage of The Corrs at Christmas, from Wembley Arena (21 December 2000). A superb performance by the talented and beautiful Corrs was further enhanced by Sky's first-class production. Let's have a lot more specials like this one!

Chris Bell e-mail

● Keep an eye out for Sky One's* Westlife in Concert *special, coming to the channel soon.
